Dear Duane,

Thank you for giving of your time to address my classes in Business and Society at the University of Colorado. Your thoughts were both stimulating and insightful. I am only sorry that you had to leave before lunch.

Your presentation was well received by the students; it is timely for us to look at the status of small business in these times of turbulent economic concerns and political upheaval. Your insights portrayed the promise which I had hoped for.

Again, Duane, it is always my personal pleasure to visit with you and hear all the things you are doing. I am interested in the many ways in which you continue to support small business enterprises, and I am sympathetic to the entrepreneurship struggle. I hope we can remain in touch--more often than once a year.

Thanks for coming by.

Very truly yours,
