

MASTER
 HUMPHREY'S CLOCK

BY "BOZ."

SA TURDAY, AUGUST 15, 1840.

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS

BY

G. CATTERMOLE AND H. K. BROWNE.

BRADBURY AND EVANS,

PRINTERS, WHITEFRIARS.

LONDON: CHAPMAN AND HALL, 186, STRAND;

J. MENZIES, Edinburgh; J. FINLAY & Co., Glasgow; S. J. MACHEN & Co., Dublin; SIMMS & DINHAM, Manchester; WARRING WEBB, Liverpool; WRIGHTSON & WEBB, Birmingham; S. SIMMS & SON, Bath; LIGHT & RIDLER, Bristol; T. N. MORTON, Boston; H. S. KING, Brighton; G. THOMPSON, Bury; E. JOHNSON, Cambridge; C. THURNAM, Carlisle; J. LEE, Cheltenham; EVANS & DUCKER, Chester; W. EDWARDS, Coventry; W. ROWBOTTOM, Derby; W. BYERS, Devonport; W. T. ROBERTS, Exeter; T. DAVIES, Gloucester; R. CUSSENS, Hull; HENRY SHALDERS, Ipswich; W. REEVE, Leamington; T. HARRISON, Leeds; J. R. SMITH, LYNN; J. SMITH, Maidstone; FINLAY & CHARLTON, Newcastle-on-Tyne; JARROLD & SON, Norwich; B. S. OLIVER, Nottingham; H. SLATTER, Oxford; P. R. DRUMMOND, Perth; E. NUTTLETON, Plymouth; BRODIE & Co., Salisbury; JOHN INNOCENT, Sheffield; F. MAY, Taunton; A. DEIGHTON, Worcester; W. ALEXANDER, Yarmouth; J. SHILLITO, York; and sold by all Booksellers and Newsmen.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Just published, in One Volume, small 8vo, price 3s. boards,

SKETCHES OF YOUNG COUPLES.

With an Urgent Remonstrance to the Gentlemen of England (being Bachelors or Widowers), on the present Alarming Matrimonial Crisis.

By the Author of "SKETCHES OF YOUNG GENTLEMEN."
WITH SIX ILLUSTRATIONS BY "PHIZ."

EIGHTH EDITION.

In One Volume, small 8vo, price 3s. boards,

SKETCHES OF YOUNG LADIES.

WITH SIX ILLUSTRATIONS BY "PHIZ."

FIFTH EDITION.

In One Volume small 8vo, price 3s. boards,

SKETCHES OF YOUNG GENTLEMEN.

WITH SIX ILLUSTRATIONS BY "PHIZ."

Bound in cloth, gilt edges, price 2s. 6d.

THE HAND-BOOK OF SWINDLING.

By the late CAPTAIN BARABBAS WHITEFEATHER,

Late of the Body Guard of his Majesty King Carlos; Trustee for the Protection of the River Thames from Incendiaries; Principal Inventor of Poyais Stock; Ranger of St. George's Fields; Knight of every Order of the Fleece; S.C.A.M.P. and C.U.R.

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS BY "PHIZ."

SECOND EDITION, WITH ADDITIONS.

In One Volume, small 8vo, price 4s. 6d. boards,

A PAPER—OF TOBACCO.

Treating of the Rise, Progress, Pleasures, and Advantages of Smoking, with Remarks on the Use and Abuse of the Fascinating Weed, Anecdotes of Distinguished Smokers, and an Essay, Trritical, Critical, Practical, and Theoretical, on SNUFF.

By JOSEPH FUME.

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS BY "PHIZ," AND WOODCUTS.

Just published, on a large sheet, price Sixpence,

THE NEW POSTAGE ENVELOPE.

AFTER THE ORIGINAL,
DESIGNED AND ENGRAVED BY "PHIZ."

In One Volume, small 8vo, price 5s. cloth,

SONGS AND BALLADS.

BY SAMUEL LOVER.

These popular Lyrics, including the celebrated "Superstitions of Ireland," are now, for the first time, collected and revised by the Author.

LONDON: CHAPMAN AND HALL, 186, STRAND.

SHOWER BATHS.

Open Baths, from 2 feet to six feet long. Sparging Baths, Roman Hip Baths, Foot Baths, Children's Shower Baths, all made of ZINK, and of the best workmanship, are manufactured by H. HEWETSON, wholesale Manufacturing Zink Worker, 57, Cannon-street, near London Bridge.

BEART'S PATENT PNEUMATIC COFFEE FILTER.

The principle of this beautiful invention is allowed, by all Engineers and Men of Science, to surpass that of any other Coffee Filter ever offered to the public. The simplicity of its construction enables the most ignorant servant to send to table, without trouble, a Pot of Coffee, surpassing, in brilliancy of colour and flavour, the most sanguine wishes of the greatest epicure in this delicious beverage. We have heard a great deal of the luxury of the Coffee introduced after dinner by the French; without trouble their black Coffee may be made by this invention, and the Coffee being made by Infusion, the Aroma only is extracted, and the rancid and injurious parts remain in the grounds.

It is a well-known fact, that, from the first introduction of Coffee, the only preventive to its general use has been the difficulty of making it. Various means have been adopted—Patents have been taken out for Filters—Percolators have been introduced—all have failed: some, from their requiring a scientific person to use them; others, from the length of time occupied in making the Coffee, and the circumstance of its being nearly cold when brought to table.

The Patentee, without hesitation, submitted his invention to the Mechanical Section of the British Association, at their late meeting in Birmingham. He was honoured by the thanks of that scientific body; and had the satisfaction of hearing it stated by them, that his invention surpassed, from its great simplicity, anything they had before seen, being in every respect adapted for general use.

The article has now been before the public for more than Six Months, and

HAS GIVEN UNIVERSAL SATISFACTION TO ALL WHO HAVE PURCHASED IT.

A fair trial only is required to convince every admirer of this exhilarating beverage, that this is the only mode by which there can be

TWO QUARTS OF COFFEE MADE IN FIVE MINUTES,

BRILLIANTLY CLEAR AND BOILING HOT.

TO BE HAD OF ALL RESPECTABLE IRONMONGERS IN TOWN AND COUNTRY.

RYTON AND WALTON, SOLE MANUFACTURERS, WOLVERHAMPTON.

The Old Curiosity Shop.

CHAPTER THE TWENTY-FIFTH.

AFTER a sound night's rest in a chamber in the thatched roof, in which it seemed the sexton had for some years been a lodger, but which he had lately deserted for a wife and a cottage of his own, the child rose early in the morning and descended to the room where she had supped last night. As the schoolmaster had already left his bed and gone out, she bestirred herself to make it neat and comfortable, and had just finished its arrangement when the kind host returned.

He thanked her many times, and said that the old dame who usually did such offices for him had gone to nurse the little scholar whom he had told her of. The child asked how he was, and hoped he was better.

"No," rejoined the schoolmaster shaking his head sorrowfully, "no better. They even say he is worse."

"I am very sorry for that, sir," said the child.

The poor schoolmaster appeared to be gratified by her earnest manner, but yet rendered more uneasy by it, for he added hastily that anxious people often magnified an evil and thought it greater than it was; "for my part," he said, in his quiet, patient way, "I hope it's not so. I don't think he can be worse."

The child asked his leave to prepare breakfast, and her grandfather coming down stairs they all three partook of it together. While the meal was in progress, their host remarked that the old man seemed much fatigued, and evidently stood in need of rest.

"If the journey you have before you is a long one," he said, "and don't press you for one day, you're very welcome to pass another night here. I should really be glad if you would, friend."

He saw that the old man looked at Nell, uncertain whether to accept or decline his offer; and added,

"I shall be glad to have your young companion with me for one day. If you can do a charity to a lone man, and rest yourself at the same time, do so. If you must proceed upon your journey, I wish you well through it, and will walk a little way with you before school begins."

"What are we to do, Nell," said the old man irresolutely, "say what we're to do, dear."

It required no great persuasion to induce the child to answer that they had better accept the invitation and remain. She was happy to show her gratitude to the kind schoolmaster by busying herself in the performance of such household duties as his little cottage stood in need of. When these were done, she took some needle-work from her basket, and sat herself down upon a stool beside the lattice, where the honeysuckle and woodbine entwined their tender stems, and stealing into the room filled it with their delicious breath. Her grandfather was basking in the sun outside, breathing the perfume of the flowers, and idly watching the clouds as they floated on before the light summer wind.

As the schoolmaster, after arranging the two forms in due order, took his seat behind his desk and made other preparations for school, the child was apprehensive that she might be in the way, and offered to withdraw to her little bed-room. But this he would not allow, and as he seemed pleased to have her there, she remained, busying herself with her work.

"Have you many scholars, sir?" she asked.

The poor schoolmaster shook his head, and said that they barely filled the two forms.

"Are the others clever, sir?" asked the child, glancing at the trophies on the wall.

"Good boys," returned the schoolmaster, "good boys enough, my dear, but they'll never do like that."

A small white-headed boy with a sunburnt face appeared at the door while he was speaking, and stopping there to make a rustic bow, came in and took his seat upon one of the forms. The white-headed boy then put an open book, astonishingly dog's-eared, upon his knees, and thrusting his hands into his pockets began counting the marbles with which they were filled; displaying in the expression of his face a remarkable capacity of totally abstracting his mind from the spelling on which his eyes were fixed. Soon afterwards another white-headed little boy came straggling in, and after him a red-headed lad, and after him two more with white heads, and then one with a flaxen poll, and so on until the forms were occupied by a dozen boys or thereabouts, with heads of every colour but grey, and ranging in their ages from four years old to fourteen years or more; for the legs of the youngest were a long way from the floor when he sat upon the form, and the eldest was a heavy good-tempered foolish fellow, about half a head taller than the schoolmaster.

At the top of the first form—the post of honour in the school—was the vacant place of the little sick scholar, and at the head of the row of pegs on which those who came in hats or caps were wont to hang them up, one was left empty. No boy attempted to violate the sanctity of seat or peg, but many a one looked from the empty spaces to the schoolmaster, and whispered his idle neighbour behind his hand.

Then began the hum of conning over lessons and getting them by heart, the whispered jest and stealthy game, and all the noise and drawl of school; and in the midst of the din sat the poor schoolmaster, the very image of meekness and simplicity, vainly attempting to fix his mind upon the duties of the day, and to forget his little friend. But the tedium of his office reminded him more strongly of the willing scholar, and his thoughts were rambling from his pupils—it was plain.

None knew this better than the idlest boys, who, growing bolder with impunity, waxed louder and more daring; playing odd-or-even under the master's eye, eating apples openly and without rebuke, pinching each other in sport or malice without the least reserve, and cutting their autographs in the very legs of his desk. The puzzled dunce, who stood beside it to say his lesson out of book, looked no longer at the ceiling for forgotten words, but drew closer to the master's elbow and boldly cast his eye upon the page; the wag of the little troop squinted and made grimaces (at the smallest boy of course), holding no book before his face, and his approving audience knew no constraint in their delight. If the master did chance to rouse himself and seem alive to what was going on, the noise subsided for a moment and no eyes met his but wore a studious and a deeply humble look; but the instant he relapsed again, it broke out afresh, and ten times louder than before.

Oh! how some of those idle fellows longed to be outside, and how they looked at the open door and window, as if they half meditated rushing violently out, plunging into the woods, and being wild boys and savages from that time forth. What rebellious thoughts of the cool river, and some shady bathing-place beneath willow trees with branches dipping in the water, kept tempting and urging that sturdy boy, who, with his shirt-collar unbuttoned and flung back as far as it could go, sat fanning his flushed face with a spelling-book, wishing himself a whale, or a tittlebat, or a fly, or anything but a boy at school on that hot, broiling day! Heat! ask that other boy, whose seat being nearest to the door, gave him opportunities of gliding out into the garden and driving his companions to madness by dipping his face into the bucket of the well and then rolling on the grass—ask him if there were ever such a day as that, when even the bees were diving deep down into the cups of flowers and stopping there, as if they had made up their minds to retire from business and be manufacturers of honey no more. The day was made for laziness, and lying on one's back in green places, and staring at the sky till its brightness forced one to shut one's eyes and go to sleep; and was this a time to be poring over musty books in a dark room, slighted by the very sun itself? Monstrous!

Nell sat by the window occupied with her work, but attentive still to all that passed, though sometimes rather timid of the boisterous boys. The lessons over, writing-time began; and there being but one desk and that the master's, each boy sat at it in turn and laboured at his crooked copy, while the master walked about. This was a quieter time; for he would come and look over the writer's shoulder, and tell him mildly to observe how such a letter was turned in such a copy on the wall, praise such an up-stroke here and such a down-stroke there, and bid him take it for his model. Then he would stop and tell them what the sick child had said last night, and how he had longed to be among them once again; and such was the poor schoolmaster's gentle and affectionate manner, that the boys seemed quite remorseful that they had worried him so much, and were absolutely quiet; eating no apples, cutting no names, inflicting no pinches, and making no grimaces, for full two minutes afterwards.

"I think, boys," said the schoolmaster when the clock struck twelve, "that I shall give an extra half-holiday this afternoon."

At this intelligence, the boys, led on and headed by the tall boy, raised a great shout, in the midst of which the master was seen to speak, but could not be heard. As he held up his hand, however, in token of his wish that they should be silent, they were considerate enough to leave off, as soon as the longest-winded among them were quite out of breath.

"You must promise me first," said the schoolmaster, "that you'll not be noisy, or at least, if you are, that you'll go away and be so—away out of the village I mean. I'm sure you wouldn't disturb your old playmate and companion."

There was a general murmur, (and perhaps a very sincere one, for they were but boys) in the negative; and the tall boy, perhaps as sincerely as any of them, called those about him to witness that he had only shouted in a whisper.

"Then pray don't forget, there's my dear scholars," said the schoolmaster, "what I have asked you, and do it as a favour to me. Be as happy as you can, and don't be unmindful that you are blessed with health. Good bye all!"

"Thank'ee sir," and "good bye sir," were said a great many times in a variety of voices, and the boys went out very slowly and softly. But there was the sun shining and there were the birds singing, as the sun only shines and the birds only sing on holidays and half-holidays; there were the trees waving to all free boys to climb and nestle among their leafy branches; the hay, entreating them to come and scatter it to the pure air; the green corn, gently beckoning towards wood and stream; the smooth ground, rendered smoother still by blending lights and shadows, inviting to runs and leaps, and long walks God knows whither. It was more than boy could bear, and with a joyous whoop the whole cluster took to their heels and spread themselves about, shouting and laughing as they went.

"It's natural, thank Heaven!" said the poor schoolmaster looking after them. "I am very glad they didn't mind me!"

It is difficult, however, to please everybody, as most of us would have discovered, even without the fable which bears that moral; and in the course of the afternoon several mothers and aunts of pupils looked in to express their entire disapproval of the schoolmaster's proceeding. A few confined themselves to hints, such as politely inquiring what red-letter day or saint's day the almanack said it was; a few (these were the profound village politicians) argued that it was a slight to the throne and an affront to church and state, and savoured of revolutionary principles, to grant a half-holiday upon any lighter occasion than the birthday of the Monarch; but the majority expressed their displeasure on private grounds and in plain terms, arguing that to put the pupils on this short allowance of learning was nothing but an act of downright robbery and fraud: and one old lady, finding that she could not inflame or irritate the peaceable schoolmaster by talking to him, bounced out of his house and talked at him for half-an-hour outside his own window, to another old lady, saying that of course he would deduct this half-holiday from his weekly charge, or of course he would naturally expect to have an opposition started against him; there was no want of idle chaps in that neighbourhood (here the old lady raised her voice), and some chaps who were too idle even to be schoolmasters, might soon find that there were other chaps put over their heads, and so she would have them take care, and look pretty sharp about them. But all these taunts and vexations failed to elicit one word from the meek schoolmaster, who sat with the child by his side,—a little more dejected perhaps, but quite silent and uncomplaining.

Towards night an old woman came tottering up the garden as speedily as she could, and meeting the schoolmaster at the door, said he was to go to Dame West's directly, and had best run on before her. He and the child were on the point of going out together for a walk, and without relinquishing her hand, the schoolmaster hurried away, leaving the messenger to follow as she might.

They stopped at a cottage-door, and the schoolmaster knocked softly at it with his hand. It was opened without loss of time. They entered a room where a little group of women were gathered about one, older than the rest, who was crying very bitterly, and sat wringing her hands and rocking herself to and fro.

"Oh dame!" said the schoolmaster, drawing near her chair, "is it so bad as this?"

"He's going fast," cried the old woman; "my grandson's dying. It's all along of you. You shouldn't see him now, but for his being so earnest on it."

This is what his learning has brought him to. Oh dear, dear, dear, what can I do!"

"Do not say that I am in any fault," urged the gentle schoolmaster. "I am not hurt, dame. No, no. You are in great distress of mind, and don't mean what you say. I am sure you don't."

"I do," returned the old woman. "I mean it all. If he hadn't been poring over his books out of fear of you, he would have been well and merry now, I know he would."

The schoolmaster looked round upon the other women as if to entreat some one among them to say a kind word for him, but they shook their heads, and murmured to each other that they never thought there was much good in learning, and that this convinced them. Without saying a word in reply, or giving them a look of reproach, he followed the old woman who had summoned him (and who had now rejoined them) into another room, where his infant friend, half dressed, lay stretched upon a bed.

He was a very young boy; quite a little child. His hair still hung in curls about his face, and his eyes were very bright; but their light was of Heaven, not earth. The schoolmaster took a seat beside him, and stooping over the pillow, whispered his name. The boy sprung up, stroked his face with his hand, and threw his wasted arms around his neck, crying out that he was his dear kind friend.

"I hope I always was. I meant to be, God knows," said the poor schoolmaster.

"Who is that?" said the boy, seeing Nell. "I am afraid to kiss her, lest I should make her ill. Ask her to shake hands with me."

The sobbing child came closer up, and took the little languid hand in hers. Releasing his again after a time, the sick boy laid him gently down.

"You remember the garden, Harry," whispered the schoolmaster, anxious to rouse him, for a dulness seemed gathering upon the child, "and how pleasant it used to be in the evening time? You must make haste to visit it again, for I think the very flowers have missed you, and are less gay than they used to be. You will come soon, my dear, very soon now,—won't you?"

The boy smiled faintly—so very, very faintly—and put his hand upon his friend's grey head. He moved his lips too, but no voice came from them; no, not a sound.

In the silence that ensued, the hum of distant voices borne upon the evening air came floating through the open window. "What's that?" said the sick child, opening his eyes.

"The boys at play upon the green."

He took a handkerchief from his pillow, and tried to wave it above his head. But the feeble arm dropped powerless down.

"Shall I do it?" said the schoolmaster.

"Please wave it at the window," was the faint reply. "Tie it to the lattice. Some of them may see it there. Perhaps they'll think of me, and look this way."

He raised his head, and glanced from the fluttering signal to his idle bat, that lay with slate and book and other boyish property upon a table in the room. And then he laid him softly down once more, and asked if the little girl were there, for he could not see her.

She stepped forward, and pressed the passive hand that lay upon the coverlet. The two old friends and companions—for such they were, though they were man and child—held each other in a long embrace, and then the little scholar turned his face towards the wall, and fell asleep.

The poor schoolmaster sat in the same place, holding the small cold hand in his, and chafing it. It was but the hand of a dead child. He felt that; and yet he chafed it still, and could not lay it down.

CHAPTER THE TWENTY-SIXTH.

ALMOST broken-hearted, Nell withdrew with the schoolmaster from the bedside and returned to his cottage. In the midst of her grief and tears she was yet careful to conceal their real cause from the old man, for the dead boy had been a grandchild, and left but one aged relative to mourn his premature decay.

She stole away to bed as quickly as she could, and when she was alone, gave free vent to the sorrow with which her breast was overcharged. But the sad scene she had witnessed, was not without its lesson of content and gratitude; of content with the lot which left her health and freedom; and gratitude that she was spared to the one relative and friend she loved, and to live and move in a beautiful world, when so many young creatures—as young and full of hope as she—were stricken down and gathered to their graves. How many of the mounds in that old churchyard where she had lately strayed, grew green above the graves of children! And though she thought as a child herself, and did not perhaps sufficiently consider to what a bright and happy existence those who die young are borne, and how in death they lose the pain of seeing others die around them, bearing to the tomb some strong affection of their hearts (which makes the old die many times in one long life), still she thought wisely enough, to draw a plain and easy moral from what she had seen that night, and to store it, deep in her mind.

Her dreams were of the little scholar: not confined and covered up, but mingling with angels, and smiling happily. The sun darting his cheerful rays into the room, awoke her; and now there remained but to take leave of the poor schoolmaster and wander forth once more.

By the time they were ready to depart, school had begun. In the darkened room, the din of yesterday was going on again: a little sobered and softened down, perhaps, but only a very little, if at all. The schoolmaster rose from his desk and walked with them to the gate.

It was with a trembling and reluctant hand, that the child held out to him the money which the lady had given her at the races for her flowers: faltering in her thanks as she thought how small the sum was, and blushing as she offered it. But he bade her put it up, and stooping to kiss her cheek, turned back into his house.

They had not gone half-a-dozen paces when he was at the door again; the old man retraced his steps to shake hands, and the child did the same.

"Good fortune and happiness go with you!" said the poor schoolmaster. "I am quite a solitary man now. If you ever pass this way again, you'll not forget the little village-school."

"We shall never forget it, sir," rejoined Nell; "nor ever forget to be grateful to you for your kindness to us."

"I have heard such words from the lips of children very often," said the schoolmaster, shaking his head, and smiling thoughtfully, "but they were soon forgotten. I had attached one young friend to me, the better friend for being young—but that's over—God bless you!"

They bade him farewell very many times, and turned away, walking slowly and often looking back, until they could see him no more. At length they had left the village far behind, and even lost sight of the smoke among the trees. They trudged onward now, at a quicker pace, resolving to keep the main road, and go wherever it might lead them.

But main roads stretch a long, long way. With the exception of two or three inconsiderable clusters of cottages which they passed, without stopping, and one lonely road-side public-house where they had some bread and cheese, this highway had led them to nothing—late in the afternoon—and still lengthened out, far in the distance, the same dull, tedious, winding course, that they had been pursuing all day. As they had no resource, however, but to go forward, they still kept on, though at a much slower pace, being very weary and fatigued.

The afternoon had worn away into a beautiful evening, when they arrived at a point where the road made a sharp turn and struck across a common. On the border of this common, and close to the hedge which divided it from the cultivated fields, a caravan was drawn up to rest; upon which, by reason of its situation, they came so suddenly that they could not have avoided it if they would.

It was not a shabby, dingy, dusty cart, but a smart little house upon wheels, with white dimity curtains festooning the windows, and window-shutters of green picked out with panels of a staring red, in which happily-contrasted colours the whole concern shone brilliant. Neither was it a poor caravan drawn by a single donkey or emaciated horse, for a pair of horses in pretty good condition were released from the shafts and grazing on the frouzy grass. Neither was it a gipsy caravan, for at the open door (graced with a bright brass knocker) sat a christian lady, stout and comfortable to look upon, who wore a large bonnet trembling with bows. And that it was not an unprovided or destitute caravan was clear from this lady's occupation, which was the very pleasant and refreshing one of taking tea. The tea-things, including a bottle of rather suspicious character and a cold knuckle of ham, were set forth upon a drum, covered with a white napkin; and there, as if at the most convenient round-table in all the world, sat this roving lady, taking her tea and enjoying the prospect.

It happened that at that moment the lady of the caravan had her cup (which, that everything about her might be of a stout and comfortable kind, was a breakfast cup) to her lips, and that having her eyes lifted to the sky in her enjoyment of the full flavour of the tea, not unmingled possibly with just the slightest dash or gleam of something out of the suspicious bottle—but this is mere speculation and not distinct matter of history—it happened that being thus agreeably engaged, she did not see the travellers when they first came up. It was not until she was in the act of setting down the cup, and drawing a long breath after the exertion of causing its contents to disappear, that the lady of the caravan beheld an old man and a young child walking slowly by, and glancing at her proceedings with eyes of modest but hungry admiration.

“Hey!” cried the lady of the caravan, scooping the crumbs out of her lap and swallowing the same before wiping her lips. “Yes, to be sure.—Who won the Helter-Skelter Plate, child?”

“Won what, ma’am?” asked Nell.

“The Helter-Skelter Plate at the races, child—the plate that was run for on the second day.”

"On the second day, ma'am?"

"Second day! Yes, second day," repeated the lady with an air of impatience. "Can't you say who won the Helter-Skelter Plate when you're asked the question civilly?"

"I don't know, ma'am."

"Don't know!" repeated the lady of the caravan; "why, you were there. I saw you with my own eyes."

Nell was not a little alarmed to hear this, supposing that the lady might be intimately acquainted with the firm of Short and Codlin; but what followed tended to reassure her.

"And very sorry I was," said the lady of the caravan, "to see you in company with a Punch; a low, practical, vulgar wretch, that people should scorn to look at."

"I was not there by choice," returned the child; "we didn't know our way, and the two men were very kind to us, and let us travel with them. Do you—do you know them, ma'am?"

"Know 'em, child!" cried the lady of the caravan in a sort of shriek. "Know them! But you're young and inexperienced, and that's your excuse for asking such a question. Do I look as if I know'd 'em, does the caravan look as if it know'd 'em?"

"No, ma'am, no" said the child, fearing she had committed some grievous fault. "I beg your pardon."

It was granted immediately, though the lady still appeared much ruffled and discomposed by the degrading supposition. The child then explained that they had left the races on the first day, and were travelling to the next town on that road, where they purposed to spend the night. As the countenance of the stout lady began to clear up, she ventured to inquire how far it was. The reply—which the stout lady did not come to, until she had thoroughly explained that she went to the races on the first day in a gig, and as an expedition of pleasure, and that her presence there had no connexion with any matters of business or profit—was, that the town was eight miles off.

This discouraging information a little dashed the child, who could scarcely repress a tear as she glanced along the darkening road. Her grandfather made no complaint, but he sighed heavily as he leaned upon his staff, and vainly tried to pierce the dusty distance.

The lady of the caravan was in the act of gathering her tea equipage together preparatory to clearing the table, but noting the child's anxious manner she hesitated and stopped. The child curtseyed, thanked her for her information, and giving her hand to the old man had already got some fifty yards or so, away, when the lady of the caravan called to her to return.

"Come nearer, nearer still"—said she, beckoning to her to ascend the steps. "Are you hungry, child?"

"Not very, but we are tired, and it's—it is a long way"—

"Well, hungry or not, you had better have some tea," rejoined her new acquaintance. "I suppose you are agreeable to that, old gentleman?"

The grandfather humbly pulled off his hat and thanked her. The lady of the caravan then bade him come up the steps likewise, but the drum proving an inconvenient table for two, they descended again, and sat upon the grass, where she handed down to them the tea-tray, the bread and butter, the knuckle of ham, and in short everything of which she had partaken herself, except the bottle which she had already embraced an opportunity of slipping into her pocket.

"Set 'em out near the hind wheels, child, that's the best place"—said their friend, superintending the arrangements from above. "Now hand up the teapot for a little more hot water, and a pinch of fresh tea, and then both of you eat and drink as much as you can, and don't spare anything; that's all I ask of you."

They might perhaps have carried out the lady's wish, if it had been less freely expressed, or even if it had not been expressed at all. But as this direction relieved them from any shadow of delicacy or uneasiness, they made a hearty meal and enjoyed it to the utmost.

While they were thus engaged, the lady of the caravan alighted on the earth, and with her hands clasped behind her, and her large bonnet trembling excessively, walked up and down in a measured tread and very stately manner, surveying the caravan from time to time with an air of calm delight, and deriving particular gratification from the red panels and the brass knocker. When she had taken this gentle exercise for some time, she sat down upon the steps and called "George;" whereupon a man in a carter's frock, who had been so shrouded in a hedge up to this time as to see everything that passed without being seen himself, parted the twigs that concealed him, and appeared in a sitting attitude, supporting on his legs a baking-dish and a half-gallon stone bottle, and bearing in his right hand a knife, and in his left a fork.

"Yes Missus"—said George.

"How did you find the cold pie, George?"

"It warn't amiss, mum."

"And the beer," said the lady of the caravan, with an appearance of being more interested in this question than the last; "is it passable, George?"

"It's more flatterer than it might be," George returned, "but it an't so bad for all that."

To set the mind of his mistress at rest, he took a sip (amounting in quantity to a pint or thereabouts) from the stone bottle, and then smacked his lips, winked his eye, and nodded his head. No doubt with the same amiable desire, he immediately resumed his knife and fork, as a practical assurance that the beer had wrought no bad effect upon his appetite.

The lady of the caravan looked on approvingly for some time, and then said,

"Have you nearly finished?"

"Wery nigh Mum." And indeed, after scraping the dish all round with his knife and carrying the choice brown morsels to his mouth, and after taking such a scientific pull at the stone bottle that, by degrees almost imperceptible to the sight, his head went further and further back until he lay nearly at his full length upon the ground, this gentleman declared himself quite disengaged, and came forth from his retreat.

"I hope I haven't hurried you, George," said his mistress, who appeared to have a great sympathy with his late pursuit.

"If you have," returned the follower, wisely reserving himself for any favourable contingency that might occur, "we must make up for it next time, that's all."

"We are not a heavy load, George?"

"That's always what the ladies say," replied the man, looking a long way round, as if he were appealing to Nature in general against such monstrous propositions. "If you see a woman a driving, you'll always perceive that she never will keep her whip still; the horse can't go fast enough for her. If cattle have got their proper load, you never can persuade a woman that they'll not bear something more. What is the cause of this here!"

"Would these two travellers make much difference to the horses, if we took them with us?" asked his mistress, offering no reply to the philosophical inquiry, and pointing to Nell and the old man who were painfully preparing to resume their journey on foot.

"They'd make a difference in course," said George doggedly.

"Would they make much difference?" repeated his mistress. "They can't be very heavy."

"The weight o' the pair, Mum," said George, eyeing them with the look of a man who was calculating within half an ounce or so, "would be a trifle under that of Oliver Cromwell."

Nell was very much surprised that the man should be so accurately acquainted with the weight of one whom she had read of in books as having lived considerably before their time, but speedily forgot the subject in the joy of hearing that they were to go forward in the caravan, for which she thanked its lady with unaffected earnestness. She helped with great readiness and alacrity to put away the tea-things and other matters that were lying about, and, the horses being by that time harnessed, mounted into the vehicle, followed by her delighted grandfather. Their patroness then shut the door and sat herself down by her drum at an open window; and, the steps being struck by George and stowed under the carriage, away they went, with a great noise of flapping and creaking and straining; and the bright brass knocker, which nobody ever knocked at, knocking one perpetual double knock of its own accord as they jolted heavily along.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THOS HARRIS & SON'S

Improved Achromatic Telescopes.

Warranted unequalled by any other house at the prices. On receiving a remittance a telescope will be sent, carriage free, to any part of the kingdom, and exchanged if not approved. No tourist or seaside visitor should be without one.

- A pocket telescope to show objects 8 miles off £0 18 0
- A pocket telescope to show objects 12 miles off 1 10 0
- A pocket telescope to show objects 16 miles off 2 2 0
- A pocket telescope to show objects 20 miles off 4 0 0

Thos. Harris & Son, Opticians, No. 52, opposite the British Museum, London, established 60 years. Recollect, not related to, nor connected with, a house of the same name.

P. & A. HUNTING & RIDING WHIPS

in great variety, from Ten Guineas to Five Shillings each, with Gold and Silver Mountings, of the newest designs, at W. & J. SANGSTER'S, Manufacturers by appointment to H. R. H. Prince Albert, 140, Regent-street. Merchants supplied.

CORNS AND BUNIONS.

PATRONISED
ROYAL
AND

BY THE FAMILY NOBILITY.

PAUL'S EVERY MAN'S FRIEND is a speedy and sure cure for those painful annoyances, without Cutting or Pain.

Prepared by John Fox, in boxes at 1s. 14d. or three in one for 2s. 9d.; and to be had of C. King, 232, Blackfriars road, and all wholesale and retail Medicine Venders in Town and Country. The genuine has the name of John Fox on the Stamp. A 2s. 9d. box cures the most obdurate Corns.

Ask for PAUL'S EVERY MAN'S FRIEND.

IMPORTANT to all who TRAVEL.—Economy of room and facility of arrangement contribute greatly to one's comfort on a journey.—MECHI, of No. 4, Leadenhall-street, London, has studiously considered every point connected with the TOILET or DRESSING-CASE DEPARTMENT, both for ladies and gentlemen, and can offer to the public the largest variety of Leather, Wood, and Japan Dressing Cases yet exhibited. Here may be suited the economic, the luxurious, or the extravagant, the prices varying from 7s. to 100 guineas, or higher if ordered. The Mechan Russian cases, at 25s., 35s., 40s., and 52s., are strongly recommended. Every article is warranted, the manufactory being on the premises. Mechi's emporium of fashion and novelties is open to the inspection of the public without their being obliged to purchase. The elegance of the establishment and variety of his stock are allowed to surpass any similar concern at the west end. Envelope and writing cases, desks, work-boxes, bagatelle tables, and papier mâché articles, &c.—4, Leadenhall-street, London.

TO HORTICULTURISTS.

Horticulturists are invited to inspect, at that most experienced and extensive Forcer's, Mr. JOHN WILMOT'S, of Isleworth, RIPPON and BURTON'S PATENT STOVES. The purity of the heat given by these Stoves will be seen, and can only be equalled by that of the sun. The expense for fuel does not exceed 2d. for 24 hours, during which time the stoves do not require any attention whatever. The vines to be seen at Mr. Wilmot's are more healthy than any ever were before by the old method of heating. The stoves were placed in the house on the 18th of April, and may be seen as above any morning from Six to One o'Clock.

SIROP ORANGÉ PURGATIF DE LAGRANGE.

In this Sirop, M. LAGRANGE has succeeded in combining with an Aperient, a FLAVOUR OF THE MOST DELICIOUS CHARACTER; FLAVOUR CANNOT BE DESCRIBED, BUT THE SIROP RESEMBLES RATHER A RICH AND LUSCIOUS WINE OR LIQUEUR THAN MEDICINE; apart, however, from this novel feature, as an Aperient it is superior to most, if not all, of those yet known. Mild, certain, and safe, it may be taken by the most delicate female, or tender infant, without the least fear. Being equally efficacious for all constitutions, ages, or disorders, it is offered to the Public as the BEST FAMILY MEDICINE ever made known. Every mother knows how difficult it is to give young children medicine, on account of the nauseous mixtures offered them; with this Sirop, however, the difficulty will be to prevent their taking medicine. This preparation will keep for any length of time in all climates. The label, which is of the most elegant and costly description, is printed either in gold, silver, copper, or black ink. Price 2s. 9d. Sold by every respectable Chemist and Medicine vender in town and country.

EQUAL TO SILVER.

DISH COVERS, of Nickel Silver British Plate (made of the solid wrought material, chemically purified). They are in appearance and durability quite equal to silver, and will improve with use. Price, per Set, of four of the most approved patterns, with elegantly chased handle and mounting, 16l. RIPPON and BURTON, sole Manufacturers, 12, Wells-street, Oxford-street, of whom may be had, of the same material, every article that is made in silver. They subjoin a few prices as a criterion:—

s. d.	s. d.	s. d.
Table Spoons & Forks, full size, with	Sugar Tongs, each	Do. Salt and Mustard Spoons, do.
fiddle handles 12 0	Table Candlesticks, per pair	Do. Soup Ladles, do. 13 0
Dessert do. 10 0	Chamber ditto, complete, each	Do. Sauce Ladles, do. 3 6
Tea Spoons, per dozen 5 0	Cruet Frames, Shell Mountings	Do. Sugar Tongs, do. 3 0
Gravy Spoons, each 4 0	King's Pattern Table Spoons & Forks,	Decanter Stands, chased edges, per
Fish Knives, each 7 0	full size, per dozen 30 0	pair 16 0
Butter Knives 2 0	Do. Dessert do. do., per dozen	Snuffers, do. 4 6
Salt and Mustard Spoons 0 6	Do. Tea, do. do. do. 12 0	Snuffer Trays, do. 5 6
Soup Ladles 8 6	Do. Gravy, do. do. each 7 0	Bread Baskets, Tea and Coffee Sets to
Sauce Ladles 1 6	Do. Fish Knives, do. 11 6	match, &c.

Purchasers are recommended to apply, post paid, for a Catalogue, which can be forwarded for a single postage. Established 1820.

NEW MUSIC.—HALF PRICE!—Chimes of Humphrey's Clock, and Fifty other single-sheet Waltz Airs, Sixpence each. The admired Waltzes of Strauss, Lanner, Labitsky, &c. in great variety. Varied themes by Czerny, Diabelli, &c. WALKER and SON, 17, Soho-square.

SIGNOR RUBINI'S NEW ITALIAN ARIETTA L'ASSENZA, composed expressly for Signor Rubini, by Signor VERINI.

"This charming arietta has delighted us beyond measure; it is continually recurring to our memory—we doubt not that our readers will be as much delighted by the perusal of the song as we have been with the performance of it."—Musical Chronicle. London: Jefferys and Nelson, 21, Soho-square.

LAMING'S TASTELESS EFFERVES- CING CHELTENHAM SALTS are used by many of the Faculty as the safest and best aperient in existence. "I do strongly recommend them as including the best circumstances attaching to the Cheltenham Waters."—Dr. Birkbeck. Sold in bottles at 2s. 6d., 4s., and 10s., by R. E. DEAR, 89, Bishopsgate, and all Chemists.

PRICE'S GOLDEN OIL OF MACASSAR is the only article that produces and restores Hair on bald places; prevents it falling off or turning grey; changes grey Hair to its original colour, frees it from scurf, and makes it beautifully soft, curly, and glossy. For dressing en Bandeaux, and confining the short loose hairs on the neck, so annoying to most ladies, it stands unequalled. Ladies are requested to ask for "Price's Golden Oil," with "28, Lombard-street," on the label, as many hairdressers sell a spurious imitation, which destroys the colour as well as the growth of the Hair.

Sold in London only by PRICE & Co., her Majesty's Perfumers, MONTPELIER HOUSE, 28, LOMBARD STREET; and the West-end Dépôts, 9, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square; 4, Arabella-row, and 25, Victoria-road, near Her Majesty's Palace.

TO FAMILIES,

TRAVELLING, RIDING, PROMENADING, or in Excursions on the WATER.

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR

Is extracted from the most beautiful exotics, and warranted perfectly innocent. It protects the Face and Skin from the baneful effects of the Sun and Dust—as Sun-burns, Tan, Parched Lips, Freckles, Harsh and Rough Skin, and an unpleasant Heat of the Face; it also completely eradicates Pimples, Spots, Redness, and all Cutaneous Eruptions; transforms even the most Sallow Complexion into Radiant Whiteness, imparts a beautiful Juvenile Bloom, and renders the Skin delicately Clear and Soft. In cases of Stings of Insects, &c., it immediately allays the most violent inflammation, and renders the skin delightfully cool and refreshing. After Bathing, it protects the Skin from the injurious effects of Salt Water.

Gentlemen will find it allay the smarting pain after Shaving, and make the Skin smooth and pleasant.

Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle, duty included.

OBSERVE—The Name and Address of the Proprietors, A. ROWLAND & SON, 20, HATTON GARDEN, LONDON, are engraved on the Government Stamp which is pasted on the Cork, also printed, in red, on the Wrapper in which each bottle is enclosed. * * * Ask for "ROWLAND'S KALYDOR."

ADVERTISEMENTS.

NEW AND POPULAR WORKS,
PUBLISHED BY ROBERT TYAS, 8, PATERNOSTER ROW.

In Monthly Parts, price One Shilling, each Part containing Four Plates, SIBSON'S ILLUSTRATIONS OF MASTER HUMPHREY'S CLOCK.

PART I.
Measuring the Swords.
Joe Toddyhigh's Cool Reception.
The Barber's Story.
"He came to conquer or to die."

PART II.
Podgers catching a Witch.
Pickwick's Introduction to the Club.
Kit's Writing Lesson.
Quilp and his Mother-in-law.

PART III.
Swiveller "breaking off" with Miss Wackles.
The Old Man and Quilp.
"Samivel, I mistrust that 'ere deceitful Barber."
Quilp separating the Combatants.

Now ready, One Volume, post 8vo, price 10s. 6d., with plain and coloured Plates,

TURKEY AND THE TURKS;

BEING
THE PRESENT STATE OF THE TURKISH EMPIRE.
By JOHN REID, Esq., Author of "Bibliotheca Scota Celtica," "Sketches in Turkey," &c. &c.

CHAP.
1. Turkey.
2. Onward course of the Turks.
3. Backward course of the Turks.
4. Reform in Turkey.
5. Turkey and Egypt.
6. Turkey and her Subjects.
7. Turkey and her Allies.

CHAP.
8. History of Constantinople.
9. Description of Constantinople.
10. The Turks.
11. The Rayahs.
12. The Yesirs.
13. The Musaphirs.
14. The Franks.

CHAP.
15. Fêtes, Feasts, and Festivals.
16. Burials.
17. Burial Ground.
18. Hotels, Cafés, and Wine Shops.
19. A Cosmopolitan Crowd.
20. The Baths.

CHAP.
21. Theatricals.
22. The Mosques.
23. The Bazaars.
24. The Antiquities.
25. Education.
26. Arts and Sciences.
27. The Bosphorus.

"Very interesting and useful volume."—Era.
"Within the compass of this volume we are presented with a full and complete description of Constantinople as it is, and with a sketch of its past history, and of the career of the Turks from their first appearance in Europe."—Britannia.

"Here, for the present, we must pause; but the subject itself, and the manner in which it is treated by Mr. Reid, are each so important, that we shall resume our notice of the work with increased interest next week."—Naval and Military Gazette.

TYAS'S POPULAR HAND-BOOKS.

PRICE ONE SHILLING EACH.

THE HAND-BOOK OF SINGING-BIRDS:

Containing directions for the Breeding, Rearing, and Treatment of the finest Songsters. Embellished with Coloured Plates of the Birds, and Engravings of their Cages.

THE ANGLER'S HAND-BOOK:

Containing concise Instructions for every department of the Art, and two coloured Plates of Flies, including many never before figured.

THE HAND-BOOK OF ARCHERY:

Wherein are described the various implements used in the Art, with directions for their use, &c., also the Laws of Archery. With an engraved view of a Bow Meeting.

THE HAND-BOOK OF CONCHOLGY:

Being a popular account of Shells, illustrated by Engravings on Wood. By a Professor of Natural Philosophy.

"A very agreeable companion at the sea side."—Observer.

THE HAND-BOOK OF GEOLOGY:

Being a concise and popular View of the Earth, its origin, composition of Rocks, Organic remains—superposition and stratification of rocks—non-stratified rocks—classification of rocks, &c. &c. With a coloured Frontispiece.

THE HAND-BOOK OF ARCHITECTURE:

Being a concise account of the different Styles of Architecture, which have been or are in use in England; with Dictionaries of the principal Terms used in describing the respective parts of a Building. By an Architect. With Pictorial Illustrations.

"One of the most useful little manuals we ever met with. No one unacquainted with Architecture should visit a Cathedral, an ancient Castle, or any old building of interest, without it, unless he is content to lose half its pleasure."—Reviewer.

THE HAND-BOOK OF THE LANGUAGE AND SENTIMENT OF FLOWERS:

Containing the name of every Flower to which a sentiment has been assigned, with its interpretation; and Introductory Observations, by the Author of the "SENTIMENT OF FLOWERS." With a coloured Frontispiece.

Also, price One Shilling,

THE LADIES' EDITION OF THE SAME WORK:

Being 1½ by 1¼ inch square. With a beautifully coloured Frontispiece. The Publisher will forward this Edition free to any party remitting One Shilling in a paid Letter.

LONDON: R. TYAS, 8, PATERNOSTER ROW.

BRADBURY AND EVANS, PRINTERS, WHITEFRIARS, LONDON.