Abstract

The purpose of this project was to create a database for the Worcester Consortium of Colleges which would link nonprofit organizations in the Worcester area with college students looking to perform community service. Surveys and interviews were conducted with Worcester community service organizations and consortium students to determine the requirements and features of the database. As a result of this, the database included basic information about prospective volunteers, the types of community service the volunteers are interested in performing, and special skills students could offer an organization. In addition, the database was designed to include a page describing the mission, current needs, and volunteer opportunities, as well as special volunteer requirements for each organization interested in working with students.

Using a survey distributed to the undergraduate student body at WPI, it was determined that most students who were currently volunteering in the area do so only because they are obligated through Federal Work Study rules, or for other reasons. While many students felt that their community service was a valuable experience, others felt that they could be more involved and contribute more to their community. A small number of survey respondents indicated that they highly valued the volunteer positions they held, and found them to be among the most rewarding experiences of their college careers.

The goal of this database was to enable every prospective volunteer the opportunity to find a position where they were valued and could contribute to the best of their abilities, and to provide local nonprofits with a resource that would enable them to find committed volunteers who were grateful for the opportunity to help, as well as grow as an individual. Thus, the database helps organizations to find volunteers who are passionate and dedicated, and enables volunteers to find organizations at which they can contribute these skills.

Acknowledgements

We would like to thank Professor Hakim and Professor Looft for their guidance throughout this project. We would also like to thank the Colleges of Worcester Consortium CEO, Mark Billota, his assistant Cynthia Young and the Student Activities Office for their contribution and recommendations to the project. Finally we would like to thank Rahima Nouaase and Yasmine Bakrim for their assistance with the creation of the model database interface and the CCNET and Service Learning Pro group for providing the team with sample demonstrations of current databases.

Executive Summary

The purpose of this project was to recommend a database solution to the Colleges of Worcester Consortium (COWC) based on primary research. This database would serve as a matching tool between nonprofit organizations in the Worcester area and college students looking to perform community service.

The research consisted of interviews with fifteen local nonprofit organizations and surveys distributed to the undergraduate student body at WPI in the months of February and March of 2009.

The interviews with organizations consisted of twenty questions regarding the history of the organization, their mission, their needs, and what they were looking for in a volunteer. From these interviews with local organizations, it was determined that:

- The majority of these organizations are always looking for young, motivated volunteers
- The volunteering positions available are great learning experiences
- The volunteer positions available were not being effectively advertised

Two surveys were distributed to the undergraduate student body at WPI; one for students who were currently volunteers, or had been volunteers in the past, and one for students who never volunteered. Over 140 students responded to the surveys, answering questions regarding what they expect of community service, what types of service they are interested in, and the level of commitment they feel to their community service. It was determined from these surveys that:

- While many students are performing community service, they are not passionate about it
- Many students are unaware of the benefits that volunteering can provide
- Many students are simply unaware of the opportunities that exist

Based on the information obtained from the surveys and interviews, it was determined that in addition to matching student volunteers with organizations, the database would have to allow the organizations to better advertise themselves, and also make community service more attractive to students. Because of the extent of designing such a database, a ready-made database is recommended.

After reviewing several options for a database package, it is recommended that the COWC uses College Central Network for their community service database. While this database package does not have some of the options of other packages more suited towards community service, it is a better choice because of its advanced searching options and that it is already being used by the COWC for their internship database.

In addition to creating this database, the following recommendations are made:

- Assign students from each college to monitor community service options and the needs of organizations in specific parts of the city. This will ensure cooperation among the colleges as well as keep the database up to date with opportunities for volunteers and the needs of organizations.
- Advertise the database and volunteer opportunities to students
- Ensure continual contact between database administrators, students, and organizations

Chapter 1: Worcester Community Service Database

1.1 A National Problem

According to the United States Census Bureau, an individual is determined to be in poverty when their income is less than the poverty threshold.¹ This threshold varies throughout the years and in 2008 ranged from $11,201 for a single person under the age of 65 to $41,624 for a family of nine people or more.² Perhaps more accurately, the Oxford dictionary defines poverty as “the deprivation of common necessities that determine the quality of life”. In the last fifty years the number of United States residents living in poverty has fluctuated between twenty-two and thirty-seven million. This means that between 1989 and 2007, 12 to 22 percent of the population was at some time unable to find adequate shelter, food, clothing, health care or education. This point is further illustrated in Figure 1.1 below which shows the number of people defined to be in poverty between 1959 and 2007.

The effects of poverty are serious and can alter the lives of individuals beyond immediate needs or problems. For example, statistics have shown that mothers in poverty are less likely to seek proper prenatal care, making their children more susceptible to illnesses and severe health problems. As a result, infants born into poverty typically have lower birth weights which can eventually lead to mental and physical disabilities. In addition, children raised in poverty tend to be more frequently absent from school because of illnesses. These children often receive a substandard education at the elementary level and go on to struggle throughout high school, eventually limiting their prospects in the future. Table 1.1 below shows that the number of U.S. residents living below the poverty level who were not employed during any given year is almost ten times as high as the number of U.S. residents who were employed that are living below the poverty level in that year.⁴

There is no doubt that the inability to obtain a job due to a lack of opportunities, which results in a lack of work experience, makes an individual more prone to a life of poverty.

Living in a state of financial instability is both emotionally and physically damaging for any human being. U.S. Poverty Studies from the Centre for Analysis of Social Exclusion, indicate that impoverished individuals suffer from higher levels of stress than individuals with stable financial circumstances.⁶ The frustration and depression associated with the inability to provide for one's family is often associated with violence in families, drug addiction and anxiety. Clearly, financial and emotional assistance is essential for families living in poverty.

As the recession of 2009 progresses, there is a serious lack of resources within society. Unemployment is rising; families are losing their homes as a result of their struggle to meet housing expenses; and citizens with special needs are inadequately being cared for. Community service organizations have a significant service void to fill because every day more individuals are having increasing difficulties in their attempts to make ends meet. Nonprofit organizations have to extend themselves to their full potential, and be even more creative during this period of recession, in order to rectify the retrogression in the economic status of the society.

1.2 Local Problem

In 2008, the lack of resources and adequate supplies that affected 12 percent of the United States population impacted Worcester County. Locally, about 10 percent of the residents of Massachusetts live below the national poverty level⁷ and according to the US Census Bureau estimates included in Table 1.2, 9.5 percent of Worcester County residents are considered impoverished.

The difficult job market and increasing home foreclosures are negatively influencing the lives of citizens of every race, social status and background. This means that those who are already impoverished, sick or disabled in the Worcester area will face even greater challenges when trying to meet their special needs. Also being influenced are the youth who are living with a lack of inspiration to excel academically and a lower sense of perseverance when they see no guaranteed benefits at the end of the road.⁹ Self-determination and motivation is difficult to attain for many Worcester citizens, and this is why nonprofit organizations play an important role in ensuring that the community needs are adequately accommodated.

Within Worcester there is a clear need for shelter and food pantries to serve low income individuals and those that have found themselves below the line of poverty due to the current state of the economy. There is also a clear need for continued support of the sick and disabled residents who are unable to adequately support themselves. Now more than ever, there is a need for increased inspiration and enthusiasm among the youth of Worcester because they are living in a society in which prosperity and stability are being replaced by uncertainty within the household. It is essential that they are paired with role models, and are encouraged to excel academically and succeed professionally¹⁰ for the betterment of society.

1.3 Rationale for Project

Community service is essential for a community to thrive to its full potential.¹¹ Locally, Initiatives to strengthen community service awareness and publicity of the nonprofit organizations in Worcester are critical to the success of the community. If the community is engaged in service it would aid in making Worcester a more thriving city. Increased and efficient community service would strengthen the morale of the community.

The need for charitable organizations in Worcester County is obvious¹², but these organizations themselves also need assistance. Since they are often understaffed and unable to use the resources they have to their full potential due to time and funding restrictions. Volunteers are the driving force behind such agencies. They commit their time, knowledge, and skills without expecting compensation.

In the Worcester area, there is unrealized potential in the large number of local college students. Few college students are volunteering to their maximum potential, or volunteering at all. Many student volunteers participated in community service because they have Federal Work Study, which requires them to perform community service in order to continue to receive funding for the following year. While this is undoubtedly good for the community, it causes students to volunteer out of obligation instead of their own volition. An even greater reason why students do not volunteer is because they simply do not know the extent of the opportunities that exist, or how much they can learn and grow from volunteering.

1.4 Project Description

The goal of this project was to provide a central and comprehensive medium for organizations to advertise their needs, and to present it in a manner which would attract student volunteers who might otherwise complete only the minimum fifteen hours per year, or no community service at all.

To achieve this goal, our objective was to identify the needs of non-profit organizations in the Worcester area and connect them with on-campus entities seeking to provide assistance. The organizations that would be targeted for this project were those that exhibit a need for sponsorship and have difficulties attaining basic assistance for their operation and public relations.

The medium through which this would be accomplished was an online database integrated into the Worcester Consortium of Colleges website. It was envisioned that the database would be easily updated to list the needs of organizations in the area, and provide a link to groups and individuals on campus that wanted to help. Surveys and interviews were conducted to identify the talents and services of college students in Worcester and the data would be included in the database. The purpose of including these talents in the database was to provide a matching tool between college students in Worcester and nonprofit organizations in the Worcester area. In this way, volunteers could use the database to find service organizations that matched their interests and organizations can find students who are willing to be dedicated to their cause.

1.5 Summary

This section outlined the issues in society that community service organizations exist to address. It then describes the problems within Worcester that need to be addressed and finally outlines why the Worcester Community Service Interactive Qualifying Project was developed and how the project will influence the community. In the subsequent sections an overview of the evolution of volunteerism will be provided in addition to information about volunteerism on a national and local scale.

Chapter 2: Background

2.1 Introduction

The purpose of this section is to provide the background foundation for the project. It will include information about the history and evolution of volunteerism; statistics on volunteerism nationally, regionally, and among college students; and also include rules and regulations for volunteers.

2.2 History of Volunteerism

Volunteerism is deeply rooted in the history of America. The earliest founders and pioneers were responsible for implementing institutions and professions of service that greatly benefited America today. After America won its independence, teachers, police officers, doctors and post masters shaped American society and worked without compensation. The first American institution of tertiary education, Harvard University, was started by John Harvard in 1636 through the donation of four hundred volumes of books from his personal library.¹³ Museums and libraries were formed in a similar fashion from contributions from selfless members of society.

Volunteerism has surely evolved over decades; for example, wars have been won as a result of volunteerism because armies were comprised completely of volunteers. The first volunteer center was formed during the aftermath of World War I in Minneapolis, MN in 1919. The purpose of this center was to link citizens affected and displaced by the war with members of society who could provide assistance. The anti-slavery movement had thousands of volunteers who dedicated themselves to the freeing of slaves. The 50's and 60's were the political era of volunteerism with the creation of the Civil Rights Movement which was powered by volunteers with a common goal for change. The Nixon administration started voluntary organizations such as: Retired and Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP), Volunteers in Service to America (VISTA) and Foster Grandparent, some of which still exist today. By 1971, the federal government started inaugurating volunteer programs.¹⁴

During the 1980's volunteer organizations started to focus on issues such as hunger, homelessness and drug abuse. The creation of soup kitchens, shelters and food drives came as a result of an increase in awareness of these issues. Aids organizations and Habitat for Humanity were also started during this time period, and relied heavily on volunteers for their success. With the advancement of technology in the later part of the twentieth century volunteerism became more visible than ever before.¹⁵ Computers improved the level of volunteer work and made volunteer organizations more organized and recognized. In the current economic period, volunteerism is critical and has the ability to greatly impact the society at large if implemented efficiently and executed successfully.

¹³ We the People: The History of Volunteerism in America, Susan Ellis, 1987

¹⁴ We the People: The History of Volunteerism in America, Susan Ellis, 1987

2.3 Volunteerism on a National Scale

Fortunately, many people realize the effects that volunteering can have on their community. In 2008, almost 61.8 million Americans volunteered, which is approximately 26.4 percent of the population.¹⁶ This number has remained relatively unchanged over the past five years, but volunteering has increased across demographics which previously did not have active volunteers. In the period from 2002 to 2005, volunteering among college students increased by approximately 20 percent, more than double the rate of any other age group.¹⁷ The steady growth of volunteer rates over time is indicative of a greater feeling of social responsibility among the community.

Why would over a quarter of the population in the United States volunteer on average 52 hours per year of their time? Volunteering is an inherently selfless act since there is satisfaction in helping others. However, volunteers also reap significant personal gains from their activities. In addition to the satisfaction of giving back to the community, volunteering is beneficial socially, mentally, and physically. Volunteers are more likely to feel a sense of fulfillment and personal accomplishment from their activities.¹⁸ Higher rates of volunteering correlate with higher self-worth, self esteem, happiness and lower rates of mortality. In 2005, The Corporation for National and Community Service compared data from each state comparing volunteer rates to mortality rates. The results were charted using a scatter plot. When a linear regression was performed using this data, it was found that in general, a higher volunteer rate correlated with a lower mortality rate. The plot is shown in Figure 2.1.

If the benefits of volunteering are so clear, then why aren't the other three out of four Americans volunteering? Fifteen percent of former volunteers interviewed in a study from Volunteering in the United States - 2005 reported "Health or Medical Problems" as their main reason for not volunteering.²⁰ Approximately nine percent of respondents listed "Family Responsibilities" as their reason for not volunteering. However, almost 46 percent listed "Lack of Time" as their reason. Volunteers are no less busy than non-volunteers, and "make time" to help others. In fact, volunteers on average spend more time working for compensation per week than non-volunteers (39 hours per week vs. 36 hours per week). Current volunteers spend more time caring for children than those who never volunteer, and watch on average 436 less hours of television throughout the course of a year.²¹ It is therefore evident that more people would volunteer if they knew how much they could gain from the experience.

2.4 Volunteering In Worcester

Massachusetts ranks 34th out of the 50 states and Washington, D.C. for volunteer rates.²² Out of 75 mid-size cities in the state, Worcester ranks 68th for volunteer rates with 22.9 percent of residents volunteering.²³ There are several reasons why Worcester's rankings are so low. In particular, Worcester has a higher percentage of residents living in multi-unit housing structures (40.2 percent vs. 34.2 percent nationally) and has a population density which is over six times greater than the national average. These factors influence how connected and obligated residents feel to their community, and thus how likely they are to volunteer.²⁴ Despite these low rankings, Worcester residents who volunteer continue to do so. Compared to the national average volunteer retention rate of 64.3 percent, Worcester volunteers have a retention rate of 81.4 percent.²⁵

There are approximately 88,000 volunteers in Worcester, who contribute an estimated $207 million contribution per year, and donate 10.6 million hours per year of service. This results in approximately 28 hours per year per resident. However, this is only three quarters of the national average.²⁶ Figures 2.2 and 2.3 show the types of community service activities that Worcester residents perform, and also what types of organizations they serve.

Figure 2.2 shows that the main activities for Worcester volunteers closely match the national averages, with the exception of “Religious” activities, in which Worcester residents are almost twice as active. This is also reflected in Figure 2.3, which shows that 35.4% of Worcester volunteers participate in volunteering of a religious nature, which is also the most popular category of service.

2.5 Volunteerism in Colleges

Volunteerism among college age students has grown dramatically in the past few years. In 2005, approximately 30.2 percent of college students volunteered compared to 28.8 percent nationally, and college students were twice as likely to volunteer as those in the same age group who were not enrolled in college.²⁹ This is illustrated in Figure 2.4 below which shows the volunteer rates of college students aged 16 to 24 compared to other demographics in 2005.

Figure 2.4 shows that students enrolled in college are volunteering more than the general adult population, and the only age groups that are volunteering more are from ages 35-54. The figure also shows that volunteer rates drop to their lowest immediately after the age group considered to be “college age.”

An increasing trend is volunteering on an “episodic” basis, where less time is committed to a specific organization. The Corporation for National and Community Service defines episodic volunteering as a commitment lasting from 0-2 weeks per year, occasional volunteering as a commitment lasting 3-11 weeks per year, and regular volunteering as a commitment lasting longer than 12 weeks per year.³¹ Figure 2.5 on the next page illustrates the length of volunteering commitments compared to the general population in 2005.

³¹ College Students Helping America, Corporation for National & Community Service, 2006

It can be determined from Figure 2.5 that college students are more likely to engage in episodic or occasional volunteering than their adult counterparts, and that they are less likely to engage in regular volunteering, which is volunteering for twelve or more weeks per year.

Despite the transient nature of student volunteers' commitments, college students are still logging substantial hours of community service. A majority of student volunteers in 2005 logged between 15 and 49 hours per year, while the second largest group of student volunteers performed between 100 and 499 hours.³³

College students are similar to the general adult population in that they are more likely to volunteer if they are employed. Figure 2.6 compares the volunteer rate for college students vs. the general adult population per hours of paid work per week. It shows that college students working between one and twenty five hours per week volunteer at a higher rate than college students who are not in the workforce.

³² College Students Helping America, Corporation for National & Community Service, 2006

³³ College Students Helping America, Corporation for National & Community Service, 2006

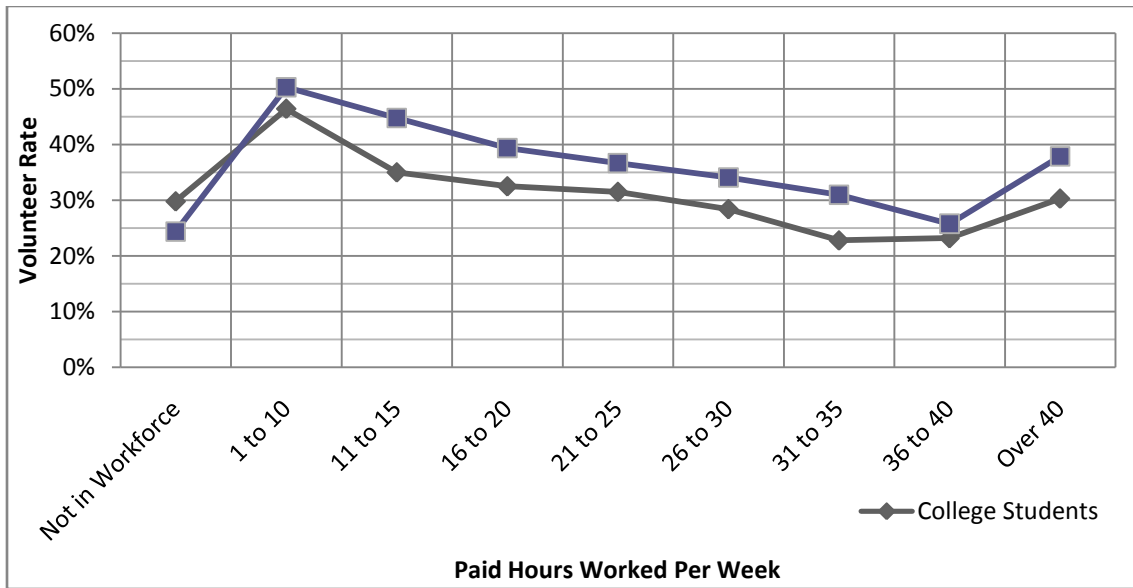

Figure 2.6: Volunteer Rate by Paid Hours Worked Per Week - College Students vs. General Population - 2005³⁴

Even though college student who are employed are more likely to be volunteering, the volunteer rate drops sharply for both college students and the general adult population for those who work more than ten hours per week. For college students, this downward trend continues, except for students who work thirty six or more hours per week.

College students participate in a wide variety of volunteer activities. Figure 2.7, on the next page, charts the different types of organizations where college students volunteer:

³⁴ College Students Helping America, Corporation for National & Community Service, 2006

Educational or Youth Services is the most popular type of organization, with 31.6% of student volunteers participating in this category. This is followed by religious activities, with 23.4% of student volunteers participating. In comparison, adult volunteers are more likely to volunteer at religious organizations, followed by educational or youth services.³⁶

2.6 Case Studies of Volunteer Organizations

The following case studies are an overview of two community service organizations in order to provide a general look into why community service organizations exist, how they work, what volunteers do to support these organizations, and what these organizations do for the community.

Habitat for Humanity

Purpose: “Habitat for Humanity International is a nonprofit, ecumenical Christian housing ministry. HFHI seeks to eliminate poverty housing and homelessness from the world and to make decent shelter a matter of conscience and action.”³⁷

How They Work: Habitat for Humanity was established in 1976 with the purpose of building and rehabilitating affordable houses for families in need. This is accomplished through volunteer labor, donations of material and money, and through the labors of the partner family purchasing the house. Partner families are able to obtain low-cost financing for the purchase of the house, and are required to pay a down payment. In addition, they are required to dedicate hundreds of hours of their own time to building their own house and the houses of others. The houses are able to be sold at a greatly reduced price because Habitat for Humanity makes no profit from the sale, and all mortgage payments are used to build more houses.

Results: In 2007, Habitat for Humanity built, rehabilitated, or repaired 49,039 homes, for a total of 279,723 since the organization was founded.³⁸

Volunteer Activities: Volunteers participate in all aspects of building a home, all over the world. Volunteers as young as 14 years old participate in non-construction activities, like landscaping or painting under the supervision of their parents. Experienced volunteers can participate in tasks requiring a certain skill set, or can lead a team of lesser skilled volunteers. Not all volunteer opportunities are on a construction site. An individual can serve as an advocate for Habitat for Humanity, informing leaders to change policies that will make housing easier to obtain for low income families.

³⁷ Habitat for Humanity Website - <http://www.habitat.org/how/factsheet.aspx>

³⁸ Habitat for Humanity Annual Report - 2007

Needs: Habitat for Humanity is in need of volunteers who can contribute the labor or materials necessary for building a home, as well as individuals who would be interested in advocating on Habitat’s behalf.

Worcester County Food Bank

Purpose: “To engage, educate, and lead Worcester County in creating a hunger-free community.”³⁹

How They Work: The Worcester County Food Bank receives donations of food and grocery items from regional supermarkets, wholesalers, manufacturers, local farmers, restaurants, caterers, federal programs and third-party food drives. The donated goods are inspected and sorted by volunteers and staff at the WCFB warehouse, and then distributed to 188 partner organizations that have feeding programs for the hungry.

Results: In 2008, over 4.6 million pounds of food and grocery products were distributed by the Worcester County Food Bank. The 188 organizations within their network served over 82,000 people in the same year. Over 50 million pounds of food and grocery products have been distributed since the Food Bank was opened in 1982.⁴⁰

Volunteer Activities: The majority of volunteers at the WCBF sort and inspect donated food and grocery products, but other volunteer opportunities are available, including food drive assistance and other special events. Volunteers can be as young as 13 years old (volunteers aged 13-16 require parental supervision), and all volunteers are encouraged to commit for two to three hours per week.⁴¹

Needs: The Worcester County Food Bank needs donation of food, grocery products, and money. Volunteers are also needed to sort and inspect product as well as organize their own food drives for the Food Bank according to suggestions the organization has outlined on their website.

2.7 Rules and Regulations of Volunteerism

Most organizations require that volunteers be above the age of sixteen and that the volunteer obtain a Criminal Offender Record Information (CORI) Background Check.⁴² The reason for this stipulation is to ensure that their volunteers meet the age of consent and have the ability to make their own decisions. It is also to ensure that they will not cause any harm to the clients of the nonprofit organizations. Individuals under the age of sixteen who want to volunteer are required to be escorted by their parents whenever duties are performed. In addition, some organizations require more details from their volunteers and implement an application process with interviews and background checks from multiple states. This is expected of organizations that provide services of a sensitive nature and have to maintain strict client confidentiality.⁴³

Other requirements are more specific to the volunteer job description, but some expectations are standard. If a job involves transporting individuals, the volunteer is required to have a valid driver's license and an incident-free driving record. Likewise, jobs in which volunteers tutor in special areas such as computer graphics and media development would require transcripts or credentials from the volunteers stating that they are qualified in the area of study. If a volunteer is to lead a large group or interact with vulnerable clients, it is expected that they receive special training from the organization. Training is essential for these positions because an insensitive remark or un-thoughtful comment can severely impact the progress of a patron and hinder their development. Organizations that cater to gender specific groups require that their volunteers be of the same gender, again this is due to the vulnerability and sensitivity of their clients.⁴⁴

Volunteer positions typically require recurring volunteers; especially nonprofits whose mission involves introducing individuals back to the society and whose goals are to build community through their programs and activities. As such, their ideal volunteer would be students who could visit with patrons on a weekly or bi-weekly basis and interact with them while contributing to the enrichment of the patron's character.

⁴³ Excerpted from Why Me Inc interview, February 5, 2009

⁴⁴ Excerpted from Hope Lodge Interview, February 13, 2009

Another common volunteer expectation for organizations that focus heavily on group development is that the volunteer meet on a regular basis. The nature of their service requires tasks to be completed on a step by step basis, and so it is essential that the volunteer meet with the clients regularly. ⁴⁵

Specialty volunteers have limited obligations and would be more welcomed by smaller organizations that want assistance with general labor. Annual fundraising and social events are another opportunity in which organizations can utilize one time volunteers. Assistance with set-up, clean-up and other logistic operations are ideal opportunities where student volunteers who participate at these events would only need to be present for at most two days and would rarely need to complete applications, CORI checks or have future attachments to the organization. ⁴⁶

Requirements could be even more flexible in the event that an organization does not need volunteers to be physically present in their building when volunteering their time and service. Their volunteers would only be required to travel to the actual location on rare occasions and could either carry out their task at once or on a continual basis. Groups of volunteers would be more useful than individual volunteers for large scale projects such as food sorting, landscaping or clean-up. Volunteer programs that sponsor and serve a meal or simply raise awareness of an organization would be most ideal for a flexible individual volunteer. Volunteerism requirements and needs vary among the organizations, and so it is essential to have organizations distinguished by these requirements and needs in order to efficiently assist and provide service to them. ⁴⁷

2.8 Summary

This section briefly overviewed the history of volunteering in the United States and also examined national and local volunteering trends. Volunteering on a national level was compared with volunteering in Worcester, and reasons why people choose to volunteer were presented. Finally, statistics regarding volunteerism among college students were presented, as well as basic requirements required to become a volunteer.

Chapter 3: Project Statement

3.1 Introduction

The purpose of this section is to outline the steps the team decided to take to fulfill its goals and achieve its objectives to ensure that the project was completed successfully in the designated amount of time.

3.2 Goals and Objectives

The goals of this project were as follows:

- Research community service in the Worcester County
- Use this research to effectively implement a database for the Colleges of Worcester Consortium which would:
 - List the specific needs of organizations in the Worcester Area
 - Facilitate the connection between student volunteers and organizations that needed assistance
 - Raise awareness of the needs of agencies in the Worcester Area
 - Make community service more attractive to students
 - Provide community service organizations with a resource that would connect them to passionate and dedicated volunteers

3.3 Project Phases

The Worcester Community Service Database project was carried out over the span of twenty one weeks. To ensure successful completion of the project, the team split the project into three segments, each with a major milestone that was to be accomplished during intervals of seven weeks. By dividing the project into three phases, the group members were able to choose and focus on organizations and their contribution to the database in an organized manner. During the first phase of the project the team's major objective was to compile a general list of nonprofit organizations that serve Worcester County. To do this, they anticipated using online searches from a number of nonprofit resource websites in addition to recommendations from knowledgeable advisors involved in the community and project collaborations.

The goal of the second phase was to identify the views and thoughts of the students and organizations on community service. The team conducted interviews in order to identify the unique needs of many of the organizations and gain an in-depth understanding of how the nonprofit organizations were managed and organized. In addition, the team created and distributed surveys to the general student body to identify the attitudes and level of community service awareness that existed within the WPI Community. The results would assist the team with the third phase which was to implement the community service database. The database would match the needs of students and nonprofit organizations, while increasing public awareness of community service opportunities within Worcester County.

3.4 Measurable Outcomes

Listed below are the measurable outcomes that the team set out to accomplish:

- The team sought to create a list of all nonprofit organizations in Worcester County. This list was to be divided into descriptive categories to facilitate ease of identification in the database.
- The team intended to interview ten organizations, with at least one from each service category.
- During interviews the team wanted to get learn about the day to day operations of the organization with the goal of assessing the organizations efficiency.
- The team intended to survey at least fifty percent of the WPI undergraduate student body to accurately gain insight into the attitudes and feelings towards community service.

The results of these outcomes are listed in the Conclusion chapter of the report.

3.5 Summary

This section defined the goals that were developed by the team members for the project and introduced the three stages in which the project was completed. These stages will be discussed in further detail in the subsequent chapter.

Chapter 4: Methodology

4.1 Introduction

The purpose of this section is to describe in detail the three segments into which the project was separated. The phases were created to ensure that objectives were met before moving on to other milestones. The details of this are described below.

4.2 Phase 1: Generating list of Worcester Community Service Agencies

To complete the first phase of the project, the team searched online for community service organizations using: www.guidestar.org , www.worcesterresources.org and www.mass211help.org which were suggested by community advisors. We hoped that the search would reveal popular nonprofit organizations in Worcester, and planned to record the mission statement, descriptions and contact information for each organization. The group would then sort the organizations by service areas to ensure ease of distinction for further analysis. The anticipated service areas were: Adult Advancement, Youth Outreach, Health, Arts and Hunger and Homelessness. Some organizations provided services that fell under more than one category and would be listed in the table under multiple headings.

4.3 Phase 2: Analysis of Community Service in Worcester

In phase two the team planned to interview fifteen qualifying organizations to gain a closer look at the overall structure and general state of organizations in Worcester. The team developed a list of requirements to determine the organizations to be interviewed. The first requirement was to have at least one organization from each service category. By selecting one organization from each category, the team would be able to ensure that information was coming from every aspect of community service within the community. The organizations were then contacted, introducing them to the group and requesting permission to participate in the study. Preference during the selection was given to organizations that responded to the email and showed interest in the project.

The team also wanted to create surveys in conjunction with the WPI Student Activities Office (SAO) to obtain thoughts and feelings about community service from students. Once the team designed a series of questions, SAO would then make recommendations and the team would then distribute the survey to the WPI student body via the Student Government Association email alias. The final factor in the decision process was the location of the organization. In order to conduct the interviews, it was necessary to travel to organizations within a fifteen minute driving distance from WPI. This resulted in the exclusion of several organizations in towns surrounding Worcester.

4.4 Phase 3: Database Implementation

The final phase of the project was to implement a database. The team corresponded with the College Central Network and Service Learning Pro group to determine a feasible database design implementation. The team would use the suggestions and needs that were communicated by the fifteen interviewed organizations and interests from fifteen Consortium students to create a demonstration version of the database. This database would then be presented to the Colleges of Worcester Consortium Community Service Engagement Committee for future implementation.

4.5 Summary

The phases of the project were determined in a way to allow the team to naturally progress through their goals and objectives. Failure to meet the requirements for one phase would hinder the team from successfully completing the following phase. It was therefore in the best interest of the team to plan accordingly to ensure that they completed all the goals that were set in this section.

Chapter 5: Data Collection

5.1 Introduction

Data was collected from organizations and students through a combination of interviews and online surveys. This section details the methods of data collection, the agency selection and the expectations of the team members when designing these methods.

5.2 Nonprofit Organization Interviews

Over forty local organizations were researched before deciding which organizations would be contacted for interviews. To reduce the list to approximately fifteen organizations, only organizations meeting a certain criteria were contacted. The criteria are listed below:

- At least one organization from each of the service categories must be interviewed. This ensured that every sector of community service was represented in the interview data.
- The organization showed interest in the project once contacted. Several organizations contacted for interviews did not respond to the request. However, many organizations were excited about the project and were willing to provide additional assistance and information.
- The organization was inclusive and beneficial to the general community. Organizations with extremely specific needs were beyond the scope of this project.
- The organization was within a fifteen minute driving distance from WPI. Because the database links organizations with college students in Worcester, only organizations within a reasonable driving distance were included.

The organizations listed below were contacted, but ultimately did not fit the criteria required for an interview, or did not respond to the interview request:

- | | |
|-------------------------------------|--------------------------|
| ➤ Girls Inc. | ➤ Southern Rehab |
| ➤ Worcester Art Museum | ➤ Worcester Fights Back |
| ➤ Horizons for Homeless
Children | ➤ Mustard Seed |
| ➤ Rachel's Table | ➤ Big Brother/Big Sister |
| ➤ Easter Seals | ➤ Seven Hills |
| ➤ Community Health Link | ➤ First Friends |

Interviews with interested and cooperating agencies were conducted in February and March of 2009. The fifteen organizations that were interviewed are listed in Table 5.1, along with the date of the interview:

5.3 Interview Questions

A list of twenty generic questions was created and used at every interview. Every question did not apply to every organization, but the questions served as a guide to collect consistent data at each organization. The questions were focused on three main topics:

- The structure of the organization itself; e.g. its history, funding sources, mission, etc.
- What the organization needed from the public and expected from volunteers
- Community service in the Worcester Area in general.

Question 1: What is the purpose of your organization?

The purpose of this question was to learn about the background of the organization being interviewed. The mission statement alone was not enough to determine what the organization was providing to the community and how it benefitted the people it was serving. This question also provided insight into the programs that the organization was offering and gave concrete examples of the services the agency provided.

Question 2: What are the reasons your organization exists?

The purpose of this question was to learn about the history of the organizations and the issues that caused its formation, and also to learn about the segment of society that the organization was serving.

Question 3: How many people does your organization serve?

In addition to describing the scale of the operations of the organization, this question determined the influence the organization had on the community.

Question 4: Where does your funding come from?

By determining the origin of the organization's funding, the team could better analyze the needs of the organization. A well-funded agency has different needs than an organization that needs to obtain funding in addition to providing for the community.

Question 5: How efficient is your organization?

This question determined how organized the organization was and what success rate it had in achieving its mission. This question was only asked at large organizations due to its potentially invasive nature.

Question 6: How many employees does your organization have?

Question 7: How many are paid employees?

Like question 5, this question provided insight into the scale or the operation, how well it was funded, and also what kind of volunteer opportunities were available.

Question 8: How many volunteers does your organization have?

Question 9: Are most volunteers regular, or one-time?

This question also determined what kind of volunteer opportunities were available, and what level of commitment the organization expected.

Question 10: Would you prefer regular or one-time commitments from volunteers?

This question was pertinent to the database structure because not all volunteers were looking for an ongoing commitment. This question also served as a segue into the activities that volunteers performed at the organization. However, it was expected that most organizations would prefer ongoing commitments from volunteers.

Question 11: Do you provide any incentives for your volunteers?

The purpose of this question was to find out if the organization had any additional methods of attracting volunteers aside from community service itself.

Question 12: What percentage of your volunteers are college students?

This question served as a measure of how closely the organization was already working with colleges in the Worcester area and also how attractive it was to student volunteers. Also, it provided insight into the tasks entrusted to college students by the organization, what kind of volunteer the organization was seeking, and what level of commitment was expected.

Question 13: Do you currently have any volunteers from WPI?

The purpose of this question was to find out if the organization was working with the Student Activities office at WPI, and also determined what schools student volunteers were coming from. An organization that had existing connections with WPI was substantially easier to integrate into the database.

Question 14: Is there anything that a WPI student with a technical background could provide your organization?

This question was related to a question asked in the student survey. Many students expressed interest in providing technical support as a volunteer activity. This question also determined what the organization needed outside the realm of traditional community service activities.

Question 15: What is your idea of an ideal volunteer?

This question allowed the organization representative to explicitly describe what was desired in a student volunteer.

Question 16: What requirements do your volunteers have to meet?

The purpose of this question was to find out what kind of restrictions an organization had for its volunteers, e.g. age requirements, background checks, gender, etc.

Question 17: What type of assistance do you need most?

This question was asked with the intention of determining what volunteers or the community could provide to the organization.

Question 18: What other needs do you have?

This question allowed the organization representative to describe any additional needs that the organization had in addition to the major needs determined in question 17, or describe potential activities that a third party could conduct to benefit the organization.

Question 19: What are the unique needs of nonprofits in the Worcester Area?

This question was asked to gain an understanding of community service in the Worcester Area as a whole, as well as open up discussion to other organizations in need aside from the one being interviewed.

Question 20: Where can we find more information on nonprofits in general?

The goal of this question was that the representative being interviewed would be able to provide the team with resources related to nonprofits or community service on a national scale.

5.4 Student Surveys

Two community service surveys were created by the team in conjunction with the Student Activities Office. One was designed for volunteers who were currently involved in community service and another for individuals who had no volunteer experience and non-volunteers who may have done service in their community in the past, but were currently not active volunteers. The purpose of the surveys was to gain insight into the thoughts and opinions of students towards volunteerism. The surveys were designed with a goal of gathering interests and skill sets of students to be included in the database. Each survey had ten questions, each of which was deliberately chosen to provide the team with the foundation upon which to build the database.

The survey consisted of two open ended questions and eight multiple choice or multiple answer questions. The first sections of the survey addressed the types of service that students are involved in, how they became aware of service opportunities and the reasons why they perform this service. The next questions served to obtain the talents of the volunteers, their interests and the type of commitment they prefer. The final questions evaluated the commitment of current volunteers and asked for ways to increase awareness of community service opportunities on campus. The survey was distributed using Google Documents after three revisions by the team, the advisor and the SAO.

5.5 Survey Details

Students were given the option to complete one of two surveys. Current volunteers were asked ten questions pertaining to their current service opportunities and past volunteers or non-volunteers were asked ten questions pertaining to service they have or have not completed in the past. Some questions were common to both surveys and the purpose of each questions and expected result are explained below.

Volunteer: What community service activities do you currently participate in?

Non-volunteer: What type of community service have you participated in the past?

The goal of the first question was to gain a broad overview of the types of community service activities that students currently and previously participate in. More importantly, in the non-volunteer survey the question was also geared towards identifying and quantifying the number of students that have never participated in any form of community service.

The expectation was that the answers would contain more high school service involvement than service during the years of tertiary education. The average high school student completed a great deal of service within the community during high school with the intention of building their resume for college. It was therefore believed that most students both volunteers and non-volunteers would list some form of service during their secondary education.

Volunteer and Non-volunteer: How do you find out about non-profit organizations in need of volunteers?

The purpose of this question was to identify and quantify the sources from which college students become aware of community service opportunities. By identifying the most reliable source, the team would be able to make recommendations to nonprofit organizations and use it to promote the database. Since on-campus Community Service Offices were underutilized, the team assumed that students found out about volunteer opportunities directly from the nonprofit organizations.

Non-volunteer: I would be more likely to participate in community service activities if they were sponsored by WPI:

This question sought to determine in further detail whether the lack of student involvement in community service was because there were not many WPI-sponsored events. This question allowed the team to determine if students were more willing to participate in community service activities if they were organized on-campus.

The team expected most students to state that they would be more inclined to be involved if service activities were sponsored by WPI because it would be more convenient in location and would most likely be more oriented with their interests.

Volunteer and Non-volunteer: Which of these volunteer categories interest you the most? What type of skills can you offer to a community service organization?

These two questions were asked with the intention of direct use for the database. The team wanted a general idea of what types of organizations to contact but also to know and quantify the type of skills, talent and interests that existed within the campus community. The team expected technical and mentoring skills to be prominent in the WPI community and predicted that a majority of the students would be more comfortable with mentoring and children services as opposed to aiding the homeless and abused.

Volunteer: What type of time commitment do you currently make at your community service activity?

Non-volunteer: What type of time commitment did you make at your community service activity? What would be your ideal time requirement per month?

The aim of these three questions was to categorize the type of volunteers that college students are based on their time commitment. The team wanted to quantify the most common availability and time commitments that college students make to community service organizations. Using this information, the team would be able to determine the ideal type of volunteer services for college students and target and include organizations that were receptive to this type or commitment.

Based on the heavy workload of the average college student, the team expected that many of the surveyed students would prefer to be episodic volunteers, volunteering for less than five hours per week.

Non-volunteer: What do you think the Community Service Office at WPI can do to more effectively make students aware of community service opportunities?

The question was asked to obtain suggestions and recommendations from the student body on ways to improve the awareness of community service on campus. The team simply wanted to determine ways in which to improve the already established methods of publicizing service opportunities. The team expected students to suggest using more online service such as myWPI or discussion boards to post service opportunities to the general campus.

Volunteer: How committed are you to your service in the community? Do you feel that you are maximizing your volunteer service?

The purpose of these two questions was to clarify whether students who were currently volunteering felt that they were performing to the best of their ability, and whether it was out of genuine dedication to the service. According to the WPI Community Service Office, a large number of their students that are involved in community service are either work study or belong to a fraternity or sorority, and were expected to fulfill strict service requirements. The team therefore predicted that many of the student's response would indicate that they were not very committed to their service and were not dedicating themselves to their full potential.

Non-Volunteer: Do you believe volunteering is important? Why or why not?

This final question for the non-volunteer survey was open ended and served as an indicator of the sincere sentiments of a non-volunteer towards service in the community. From this the team wanted to determine whether or not students were aware of the importance of community service and more accurately determine where the root of the problem with community service involvement lies. The team predicted that most students would state that service in the community was important, and hoped that many would take the time to elaborate on their genuine reasons for this.

Volunteer: What is the driving force behind your volunteer commitment? Why do you volunteer?

This question served to identify sincere sentiments just as the final question for the non-volunteer survey. With this question the team hoped to determine with justification why students were genuinely volunteering and the motivation behind their continued service to the community. Once again, with the knowledge of the work-study majority of volunteers the team expected most of the results to reflect some form of obligation to service out of requirement.

5.6 Summary

Every interview and survey question was asked with the intention of obtaining a specific piece of information. The format and flow of questions were designed with the organizations and students in mind to ensure that the questions were easy to follow and to limit as many erroneous answers as possible. In the following chapter the team will discuss the results from the interviews and surveys.

Chapter 6: Analysis of Results

6.1 Introduction

The purpose of this section is to present the results of the second phase of the project, in which local nonprofit organizations were interviewed and local college students were surveyed regarding community service.

6.2 Interview Analysis – Nonprofit Organizations

Fifteen local organizations were selected and interviewed in February and March of 2009. The organizations interviewed are shown in Figure 6.1. The results from each interview are included in the section below.

Note - Shown on the map are the locations of the interviews. Some organizations had multiple locations, which are not shown.

Why Me

Mission: Why Me is dedicated to “providing love and support for families with childhood cancer.” Why Me was founded by 13 year old Sherry Shepherd during her four year struggle with cancer with the purpose of easing the pain felt by children cancer patients and their families.

Services Provided: Why Me is a unique organization in that it is willing to do whatever it takes to ensure the emotional and financial well being of the families it serves. Why Me holds a wide variety of events to bring its families together and to allow the children of these families to “feel like kids again.” Why Me is a tightly grouped organization and has a high rate of volunteer loyalty. Eighty seven percent of all families served since 1985 are still active with the organization.⁴⁸ One of the most important services that Why Me provides is the use of a house specifically designed to support its 465 member families. Sherry’s House serves as headquarters for Why Me, and also as the center for many of Why Me events. Sherry’s House also has eight bedrooms where families can stay completely free of charge during their child’s treatment, as well as numerous activity and game rooms where family fun events are held.

Needs: The needs of Why Me were as large as the scope of the services they provided. Many of the organization’s needs were simple household items: toiletries, food, cleaning supplies etc. because of the domestic nature of many of the services they provided. Why Me maintains a list of these items on their website. Volunteers were also needed; however the most valuable services that volunteers could provide were organizing fundraising events because Why Me received the majority of its funding through internal and external fundraisers.

Additional Details: Why Me is an acronym which stands for Worcester Help for Youth Memories Everlasting that was created by Sherry Shepherd. They work closely with the University of Massachusetts and Boston Children’s Department of Oncology; the volunteers from Why Me regularly volunteer with the patients at these hospitals and inform them about the services of Why Me and Sherry’s House. Although Why Me is affiliated with these hospitals they receive no form of financial assistance from these organizations and are funded solely from the donations and fundraisers put on by the organization and their volunteers.

Why Me is governed by a board of directors and has approximately ten employees and a regular volunteer base of 230 individuals. Volunteers have very little requirements: an approved CORI check and a minimum age of fourteen. The Why Me organization has never had to turn any volunteers away and do not have a required time commitment. Why Me Inc has been active members of the Worcester community since the eighties, helping and have been affiliated with WPI for the past few years and currently attend the yearly Community Service fairs that are held in the fall. Although they receive a fair amount of feedback from WPI students during the fairs their volunteers are still generally retired citizens and high school students.

Conclusions: What sets Why Me apart from other organizations is that it is flexible in the services that it provides and does not have to follow strict guidelines in the support it provides families. In addition to hosting events and bringing families struggling with childhood cancer together, Why Me will go as far as paying every day bills of families in financial distress. The services provided by this organization were boundless and representative of how truly dedicated and compassionate its volunteers, employees, and member families are about supporting those in need.

Boys & Girls Club of Worcester

Mission: “To help youth, especially those who need us most, develop the qualities needed to become responsible citizens and community leaders, through caring professional staff who forge relationships with our youth members and influence their ability to succeed in life.”⁴⁹

BOYS & GIRLS CLUB of Worcester

Services Provided: The Boys and Girls Club of Worcester was formed in 1889 after a need for a safe place for boys to hang out instead of on the streets was realized. The Boys and girls club is open to children between the ages of eight and eighteen from all demographic and financial backgrounds and serves over 300 children per day in its Worcester club houses. Today however majority of the members of the Boys and Girls Club live below the National Poverty Line. As such many of the members are from impoverished communities with limited resources. The club functions as a place “where their voice can be heard”⁵⁰ and a place where many of the pressures from their communities are alleviated. The Boys and Girls Club provides a safe place for children during their development so that they will reach their full potential as adults. The Boys and Girls Club offers a wide range of services, but generally it serves as a location for children to come after school to participate in sports, arts, or receive academic assistance. The Boys and Girls Club also provides reduced cost daycare for children under the age of eight.

⁴⁹ Boys and Girls Club website - <http://www.bgca.org/>

Needs: The Boys and Girls Club is a nationwide organization and needs qualified volunteers who can help to utilize their resources to its full potential. For example, the organization was able to purchase equipment for a recording studio, but needed volunteers to show them how to use it properly. The organization was also looking for a volunteer to start a graphic arts program in its computer lab, and was also in need of basic computer maintenance services. In addition to this, they expressed a need for students in math and science to dispel the stereotypes of science students.

Additional Details: The purpose of the Boys and Girls Club is “to awaken a sense of possibility in the lives of the youth to become responsible citizens and leaders and positively impact their communities”. Children pay an annual fee of twenty five dollars to be able to use the facilities and services. This fee in no way covers the costs of running the club house and only accounts for about ten percent of the expenses. As such the center receives additional funding from outside donors such as local businesses, as well as umbrella organizations such as United Way. A fair amount of fundraising is done to supplement club expenses.

The Club attains volunteers by contacting colleges and attending community service fairs in the Consortium. They have worked with few WPI students in the past and would love to build a stronger relationship. The club currently has approximately sixty five paid employees that are both full time and part time; a regular volunteer base of one hundred and fifty per year.

⁵⁰Joe Hungler, Boys and Girls Club Interview, February 9, 2009

Conclusions: The Boys and Girls Club is a large organization in constant need of volunteers. Because of its size, the organization was well organized and needed little assistance with administrative activities or fundraising, but was eager to have volunteers design new programs or show them how to make their existing programs better. The Boys and Girls Club has a tremendous amount of resources that are being underutilized because of a lack of volunteers. This organization has laid the foundations and need students such as ourselves to volunteer so that the youth of Worcester can reap its benefits.

Dismas House

Mission: "Dismas House is a supportive community that provides transitional housing and services to former prisoners and real-life educational opportunities to students from area colleges, and from throughout the US and the world! The men and women of Dismas House live and work as a family, helping each other grow towards the goal of reintegration into society. Dismas House provides a consensus-based, sober alternative to a return to the streets, and a return to incarceration. Our cooks, donors, board members and other volunteers help make reconciliation a reality."⁵¹

Services Provided: Dismas House is part of a three stage program designed to reintegrate ex-prisoners with society, and also to introduce society to its clients. Dismas House provides a place for twelve ex-prisoners to live during their reintegration, but they are required to pay for part of the operating expenses of the house. They are also required to perform chores, stay sober, and be an active participant in the program. Dismas House also provides internships to local college students seeking a career in nonprofit management.

Needs: Dismas House has a total of ten employees that vary as full and part time as well as a therapist, case manager and lawyer. They receive most of its funding from government grants and third party donations. They also had a volunteer base of 50-60 regular volunteers. What Dismas House needs most are regular volunteers who can prepare meals for its residents. Most of their current volunteers are professionals and students and they have standard volunteer requirements. It is important for the volunteers to be a regular presence at the house because part of the Dismas program is to create a sense of community, which makes reintegration easier for the residents and society. Also needed was technical support and assistance with computer maintenance.

Conclusions: Dismas House was unique in that it expected both its residents to reintegrate into society, but also expected society to play an active role in their recovery. This “two way street” ideal was reflected throughout the organization. Dismas House provided a place for ex-prisoners to live, but it was expected that their residents would pay for it. It was also required that the residents had to be enthusiastic about their reintegration, and assist other residents as well. Because of the sense of community that is built at Dismas House, their success rate ranges from 69-75 percent⁵². When compared to the 75 percent of the prison population who return to jail after being released, it is obvious that Dismas House is highly successful.⁵³

Dismas House was one of the smaller organizations interviewed and did not have a national counterpart from which they received funding. This was evident in the upkeep and appearance of their surroundings and facilities. The execution of their mission was clear to us during our interviews as we observed their residents. One helpful resident assisted us at the door and another was busy with the classifieds of the newspaper trying to secure a job. Dismas can benefit from volunteers of every skill set: administrative assistance for their grant writing, technical assistance for their website or interpersonal assistance with interacting with the residents would be welcomed and well received by the staff and patrons.

Compassion Pregnancy Resource Center

Mission: The Compassion Pregnancy Resource Center exists to “to provide accurate information, education and service to women and men facing unplanned pregnancies.”⁵⁴

Services Provided: The Compassion Pregnancy Resource Center provides free pregnancy tests, options counseling, referrals and resources, abortion recovery support, abstinence education program and material aid for mothers and babies. The organization exercises strict confidentiality with all of its operations and noted very importantly that they are not a medical facility, and do not facilitate abortions.

⁵² From: “What is Dismas House?” - <http://www.dismashouse.org/company.php>

⁵³ From: “What is Dismas House?” - <http://www.dismashouse.org/company.php>

⁵⁴ Excerpted from Compassion Pregnancy Interview - 2/09/09

Needs: Due to the confidential nature of the organization, student volunteers are not needed. Their volunteers are trained peer counselors who are certified to provide support to their clients. They have three paid members of staff who are paid through grants and outside funding when available. The organization needs assistance with raising awareness of their organization so that students know that their services are available. The organization received the majority of its funding through donations from individuals, churches and businesses, and will be pursuing more grants as an additional funding source. Interest in a volunteer to help them write grant proposals and volunteers to advertise their services were expressed, but the organization did not otherwise require volunteers.

Conclusions: The Compassion Pregnancy Resource Center was a tightly run organization with strict volunteer requirements due to the confidential nature of its activities. Compassion Pregnancy stood out above other organizations because of the level of dedication and selfless commitment of their members. It is safe to say that the organization is 99 percent sustained by volunteers. The director and two administrative members of staff are not guaranteed salaries, in fact only receive small stipends when donations and grant funding is left over after covering other operational costs. Generally, each interviewed organization had at least 5 main staff members that were paid to ensure that the organization was able to be run at all times. Their workers of Compassion Pregnancy offer their services with or without a salary and this is a truly commendable quality of its workers.

Hope Lodge

Mission: The Worcester Hope Lodge serves a “home away from home” for patients undergoing active outpatient cancer treatment outside their own communities.⁵⁵

Services Provided: The Worcester Hope Lodge provides a place to stay for patients undergoing cancer treatment in the Worcester area. Although they do not cater specifically to entire families, there are nine bedrooms for patients and their caregivers to stay free of charge. Hope Lodge also provides other services sponsored by the American Cancer Society to help cancer patients and their families cope with the challenges that cancer presents.

⁵⁵ From Hope Lodge Worcester website -

http://www.cancer.org/docroot/subsite/hopelodge/MA_Worcester/wr_general_information.asp

Needs: When asked what the organization needed the interviewees responded with “everything”. Hope Lodge is in need of volunteers to prepare meals for their residents and to provide basic computer training for some of their residents. They would also welcome volunteers who could assist them with their computer hardware maintenance and upgrades. In addition to this they would also welcome donations whether monetary or gifts of food and household supplies.

Additional Details: Hope Lodge is a small component of the American Cancer Society that exists to provide temporary housing for adults in active cancer treatment. There are 30 Hope Lodges within the US and Puerto Rico and they are funded by the ACS and third party fundraising. They have a regular volunteer base of sixty students with tasks that range from shuttle drivers to fundraisers. Hope Lodge is also sustained by donations from generous friends in the form of gifts and payment of bills. Their volunteers are of all types: youth groups, high school students, college students and retired individuals. A volunteer is required to complete a background check, and application. Patients are accepted into the service after receiving written consent from a doctor and are referred by social workers or coordinator from hospital. They have three full time employees, five part time employees and would welcome volunteers to assist with everyday administrative and patient related tasks.

Conclusions: Hope Lodge is one of the many support services offered by the American Cancer Society. The facility was well maintained and the atmosphere was very relaxed and orderly. Hope Lodge was the most organized organization that was interviewed. The staff job descriptions were clearly defined and they had several systems in place to make the resident experience a hassle free one. Some of these were: daily shuttle service to the hospital, marked shelves for storage, notice boards with pictures of all their residents with names and local activities for the weekend.

United Way - Volunteer Center

Mission: “The United Way of Central Massachusetts inspires and mobilizes the caring power of our community to ensure that children, youth, families, and those in need have the opportunity to become self-sufficient and successful members of society.”⁵⁶

Services Provided: The Volunteer Center at the Central Massachusetts branch of the United Way provides a portal for volunteers to find organizations to serve.

Needs: The United Way has an impressive volunteer base about five hundred of which 25% are college students and are currently not lacking in any area of their basic needs. They would however like to encourage students to register with them if they would like to maximize their volunteer experience. They are open to providing students with any information they made need about nonprofit organizations in Central Massachusetts and are willing to connect students with nonprofit organizations that they may be interested in.

Additional Details: The United Way is a large organization with a purpose of bringing people together to solve the problems in the community. It was started out of a need to provide a portal to get information and connect with nonprofits. The volunteer portion of the United Way was started by an organization formerly known as the Volunteer Center and was adopted by United Way in the 1960s. The majority of the funding for the Volunteer Center is acquired through grants and a small portion comes from the United Way administrative budget.

The United Way supports approximately two hundred and fifty organizations and raised an estimated six million dollars last year to donate to the community. Volunteers are the driving force behind the Volunteer Center, which only has a total of four employees

Conclusions: The United Way is an excellent resource for nonprofit organizations of every size because they have the ability to provide funding and can assist organizations that may have difficulties with advertising and staying ahead of technology. The United Way is well established and is currently working on projects to increase sporadic volunteer activities in Central Massachusetts similar to the Boston Cares program. The United Way can be described as the single most important nonprofit organization in the community because through them other organizations of every service category are sustained and so they touch the lives of individuals in need of a variety of services.

⁵⁶ From United Way of Central Massachusetts Website - “Who We Are” - http://www.unitedwaycm.org/who_we_are/who-we-are.htm

Jeremiah's Inn

Mission: The mission of Jeremiah's Inn has three parts:

- Residential Recovery Program - Jeremiah's Inn has 28 "transitional beds" for homeless men. This is part of their social model recovery program where each resident gives and receives help in reaching their goals. The men must be sober, mentally stable, and willing to change their lives. In addition, there are two rooms available for emergency boarding.
- Emergency Food Pantry - Jeremiah's Inn operates an emergency food pantry which in 2003 served over 16,000 individuals.
- Education - Jeremiah's Inn works to increase public awareness of homelessness and hunger.

Services Provided: The residential recovery program at Jeremiah's Inn serves 28 homeless men at a time, guiding them out of homelessness by providing food, shelter, clothing, and also access to case managers and lawyers. The residents are charged $10 per day for this service. There are two emergency beds available at all times for non-resident homeless men for up to seven days, which allows them access to the services available to long term residents. The food pantry is open to families on a once per-month basis. The food pantry serves four to five hundred families per month.

Needs: Jeremiah's Inn needed material goods to pass on to their residents and food bank patrons. Because the men in the program had to be active participants in the house, the organization did not need volunteers for staff positions. The largest need was non-perishable items for the food pantry.

Additional Details: Jeremiah's Inn is not affiliated with any larger organization, and is funded by the State Department of Health and Bureau of Substance Abuse. They are also funded by grants and private donations from their annual appeal. They have ten employees and about 150 regular volunteers that prepare meals, donate to the food pantry, bake birthday cakes and adopt rooms for renovation. The organization serves about four hundred to five hundred families a month in the food pantry and the food is supplied by federal and state agencies as well as the Worcester County Food Bank. About forty percent of their volunteers are college students and the only requirements for volunteers are CORI checks. They do not currently receive any volunteers from WPI, but are looking for long term volunteers because there are few opportunities for episodic programs, and their goal is to build community for their residents.

Conclusions: Jeremiah' Inn did not need many in-house volunteers because of how active their residents are in running the house, but they did need assistance in creating food drives. This interview also allowed the team to gain perspective on volunteerism from a nonprofit's point of view. The executive director of Jeremiah's Inn noted that most donations came from lower-income individuals, because they were more likely to have experienced homelessness or hunger in their life. Jeremiah's Inn appeared to be a very independent organization receiving very little government funding with the exception of their emergency food pantry and no funding from umbrella organizations such as United Way. The director noted that the organization enjoys their freedom to execute their programs in the best way they see fit and so try to seek funding independently as opposed to by following federal guidelines. It was also mentioned that the staff is very dedicated to service beyond their cause and will almost never allow an individual to leave through their doors without a solution or reference even if it is not related to their area of service.

Ecotarium

Mission: "To contribute to a better world by inspiring a passion for science and nature through discovery."⁵⁷

Services Provided: The Ecotarium fosters educational growth by providing science and nature-themed exhibits. In addition, the Ecotarium also provides homes to animals who could not otherwise survive on their own in the wild as part of their animal care program. The Ecotarium also maintains several trails on its grounds which inform visitors of the native New England environment.

Needs: The Ecotarium needs volunteers to fill a variety of positions. The Ecotarium uses its 130 volunteers to perform tasks from directing visitors in the parking lot to grounds maintenance, research, and program development. College volunteers were desired because they could use their knowledge to better inform visitors, and their creativity to design new exhibits.

⁵⁷ From Ecotarium website - About the Ecotarium - <http://www.ecotarium.org/about/>

Additional Details: The Ecotarium has about forty staff members and one hundred and thirty regular volunteers. They are funded by grants, endowments and fundraising. They receive about two hundred guests per week and about four hundred during volunteer week. Many of their volunteers are high school students, senior citizens and retired professors/scientists. Volunteers are extensively trained and expected to make a commitment of six months and be a minimum of sixteen years old. Currently they have eight students from WPI and believe that WPI students would be particularly fit for their MicroDiner where they showcase demonstrations of wind energy, and work with microscopes and different functions. They are also open to WPI students bringing demonstrations from classes to put on display.

Conclusions: The Ecotarium is a large and well funded organization, but still depend on volunteers. The size of the Ecotarium allowed it to offer a large number of exciting and engaging volunteer opportunities which were attractive to student volunteers who could commit for a minimum of six months.

Abby's House

Mission: "The mission of Abby's House is to provide emergency and long-term housing, as well as woman-centered advocacy and support services to homeless, battered and low-income women, with or without children. In addition, we provide education to the community about the issues with which our guests and residents struggle each day. We fulfill our mission by empowering women to lead self-directed lives filled with dignity and hope. By offering warm hospitality, we seek to be in relationships of caring and support. In naming the oppression that exists in women's lives, we strive to create change."⁵⁸

⁵⁸ From Abby's House Website - http://www.abbyshouse.org/about_us/mission.shtml

Services Provided: Abby's House provides a number of services for women:

- Emergency Shelter - The emergency shelter at Abby's House provides emergency housing, food, and clothing to 300 women and children each year.⁵⁹
- Permanent Housing - The core of Abby's House is their residency program in which 78 apartments are available for women in need. Women receive counseling as part of this program through a personal advocate to ensure that each resident is making steps towards independence. The program charges rents well below market rate, and although the housing is considered permanent, most residents stay for an average of two years.
- Women's Center - The Women's Center provides a place where women can gather to partake in programs to reduce the mental and social effects felt by women in poverty.
- Thrift Shop - The thrift shop provides free clothing to Abby's House residents, and offers clothing at greatly reduced costs to the general public.

Needs: Abby's House needed funding assistance, as well as one-time volunteers for small projects and to provide computer training to residents.

Additional Details: Abby's House has only 7 full time employees and is supplemented by volunteers who assist with administrative tasks on a daily basis. Their volunteer base consists of approximately 200 individuals and generally prefers female volunteers due to sensitivity of some of their patrons. The majority of their volunteers are college students. Volunteers are expected to remain clean and sober and be respectful to their patrons and sensitive to their needs.

Conclusions: Abby's House demonstrated how a grassroots movement can turn into a large and successful nonprofit organization. Abby's House was created in 1976 and has since served 11,000 individuals. Although proceeds from charging rent and the thrift shop help to offset some of the cost of running the organization, Abby's House still needed funding assistance. Abby's House received no government funding as a result of their strict residency requirements, but despite being the only shelter in Worcester to claim this, 93 percent of residents enrolled in the residency program remained in stable housing after leaving the program.⁶⁰

Worcester County Food Bank

Mission: “To engage, educate, and lead Worcester County in creating a hunger-free community.”

Services Provided: Worcester County Food Bank is one of twenty food banks nation-wide from the National Feeding

America Foundations. They engage the community by distributing food to a number of agencies. The Worcester County Food Bank works with 180 partner organizations, 88 of which are emergency food pantries such as Jeremiah’s Inn and 35 of these programs are right within Worcester. In 2008, the WCFB distributed over 4.6 million pounds of food and grocery items.⁶¹ In addition, the WCFB also provides nutritional education programs and serves as an advocate for hunger-relief services.

Needs: The Worcester County Food bank needs donations of food, grocery items, and funding, as well as large groups of volunteers willing to commit to a one-time volunteer opportunity.

Additional Details: The Worcester County Food Bank receives over five hundred million pounds of food per year. The food is provided free of cost with the exception of a small maintenance fee charged to the agencies to alleviate the cost of freight shipping. Much of the food is donated from local wholesales and supermarkets and some from household volunteers. Donations from the community are still substantial despite the economic hardships that we are currently facing.

The Worcester County Food Bank has approximately twenty employees that are either full time or part time. They have about two hundred regular volunteers per year whose main responsibility is to sort the food that they receive. Their volunteers are mostly groups as opposed to individuals and have to submit applications and receive special training. They expressed a lack of younger volunteers with physical strength and stamina that would be very beneficial to the food pantries. Most of the aid they receive is from individual donations, state funding and grants.

Conclusions: It was noted during the interview that the Worcester County Food Bank did not receive many college age volunteers. It was suggested that the reason behind this is because many college students do not know how satisfying volunteering can be, and also do not understand the magnitude of social problems like hunger. This organization served over 82,000 individuals in 2008, and provided many volunteer opportunities for college students looking for either one-time or regular volunteering commitments. WCFB was one of the more organized nonprofits with specific detailed tasks for their volunteers. The requirements and commitments were also well defined and so it did not offer a great deal of flexibility for college students. This combined with the distance from the central college area could also be reasons why their college student volunteer percentage is so low.

Massachusetts Veterans Inc.

Mission: Massachusetts Veterans Inc. (MVI) provides housing services to local homeless veterans and also provides transitional services to veterans who progress from the shelter. The average length of stay is between 2 and 2.5 years, and veterans who progress through the shelter are encouraged to take advantage of the other services that MVI provides.

Services Provided: MVI provides housing to 79 homeless male veterans and 6 female veterans in a safe, drug and alcohol-free environment. In addition to housing, MVI also provides three meals per day, on site health and legal assistance, and programs for personal and professional development including GED training, computer training, and onsite addiction counseling.

Needs: MVI was in need of volunteers to provide and prepare meals for veterans taking advantage of the meal programs, and encourage large groups of volunteers to participate in this program.

Additional Details: The Massachusetts Veterans Inc was started in 1992 because of a lack of residential and wellness facilities for veterans. The organization has two locations: Worcester and Devens, Massachusetts. Mass Veterans are not connected to any other nonprofit organizations and is currently working on opening an outreach center with a food bank, classes for the community, housing and daycare.

They have forty-one paid employees and about eighty volunteers per years. Volunteers are required to complete applications, interviews and a CORI check. Many of their volunteers are one time committers who return and turn into regular visitors. They currently receive volunteers from the WPI Air Force program. They are funded by the state and federal funding, private donations and from grants. They do a significant amount of fundraising with yearly events such as golf tournaments and fundraising balls.

Conclusions: MVI had a large number of paid employees, and did not need assistance with administrative tasks. Volunteering at MVI would be a good opportunity for a group of students looking to perform a one-time service. The team had the pleasure of visiting during a meal that was sponsored by a local bank. It was surprising to see the number of individuals who once defended our country and are now unable to provide for themselves. The volunteers and staff members all seemed happy to be giving back to people who risked their lives for them. This organization has a clear cut mission and should have very little trouble finding volunteers to support them.

Boy Scouts of America - Mohegan Council

Mission: “The mission of the Boy Scouts of America is to prepare young people to make ethical and moral choices over their lifetimes by instilling in them the values of the Scout Oath and Law.”⁶²

Services Provided: The Boys Scouts of America provide a program for young people designed to build character and leadership through fun educational activities. The Mohegan Council of the Boy Scouts of America, which is active in the central Massachusetts area, serves 4700 children and 3600 adults.

Needs: Boy Scouts of America is a large, national organization and were not actively seeking college age volunteers. Most volunteers are adults who have children in the program, but the organization was open to one-day educational programs designed by a college students.

Additional Details: The Boy Scouts exist to instill value in scouts that serve to help these young men in making ethical decisions throughout their life by giving them the opportunity to lead at a young age. The organization has seven employees and over two thousand volunteers throughout the country. Many of their volunteers are adult parents whose children are involved in the program. Most of their aid comes from grant funding with a small portion from United Way and the volunteer families involved. The Worcester Boy Scouts serves approximately three hundred youth and are in need of after school programs, summer camp leaders and volunteers for day projects. Volunteers are required to have background checks and training in youth protection. Boy Scouts prefers regular volunteers and currently receive volunteers from the APO fraternity of WPI.

Conclusions: The Boy Scouts were looking for a particular type of volunteer; ideally a volunteer would be someone who had been previously involved with scouting and wanted to stay active in the organization. One would assume that this organization is well managed since it has been in existence for so many years, but the dilapidation of the building and very small number of employees led the team to believe that there was a need for more than just troop volunteers. The Boys Scout council would be an ideal opportunity for students who could evaluate their operation and assist with making it more efficient and making their technology more streamline.

Pernet Family Health Service

Mission: “In the tradition of the Little Sisters of the Assumption, Pernet Family Health Service supports the physical, social, psychological and spiritual development of individuals and families by providing home based health and social services that lead to long-term strengthening and enhancement of family and community life.”

Services Provided: Pernet Family Health has a number of programs designed to strengthen family and community bonds. Data excerpted from Pernet Family Health Interview - 3/17/09

- Early Intervention - Provides developmental services to families of children who are at risk of developmental delay.
- Maternal Child Nursing - Home care for mothers who are pregnant or parenting young children.
- Young Parent Support - Pernet teaches parenting skills to new parents under the age of 23.
- Emergency Assistance Program - In addition to offering advice on long-term hunger solutions, Pernet operates an emergency food and infant supply pantry. Patrons can obtain two day's worth of supplies once per month.
- Neighborhood Events - Pernet hosts neighborhood events such as block parties and ice skating trips.
- Youth Programs - Pernet's youth program includes homework help sessions with local college students, mentoring programs, and summer jobs for low income youth.
- Father's Support Group - Provides support to new fathers.
- Homemaker Program - Provides shopping and assistance with light chores to those who are unable to perform them on their own.

Needs: Pernet Family Health was in need of volunteers looking for unpaid summer internships in the social services field, and also looking for volunteers for their after school programs, parenting support groups, and for participants for the Walk For Hunger in Boston.

Additional Details: Pernet has between twenty to thirty employees, five of whom are paid through state contracts with Community Service Foundations. Their monthly volunteer base consists of 50 individuals of which fifty percent are college students. Volunteers are required to complete a CORI check and be willing to make a time commitment of one semester. The organization is funded through private donors, grants and state and federal grants.

Conclusions: Pernet Family Health had a large number of programs and was already working with several Worcester colleges. There were numerous volunteer opportunities with both one-time and recurring commitments, and also opportunities for those pursuing a career in community service. The Pernet staff was very involved in number of community activist organizations throughout Worcester and the team believes that Pernet would be ideal for a volunteer who is interested in the social issues of the community.

Girl Scouts

Mission: “Girl Scouting builds girls of courage, confidence, and character, who make the world a better place.”⁶³

Services Provided: Girl Scouts participate in field trips, community service activities, cultural exchanges, and other activities to demonstrate to girls the values of self-worth and personal strength.

Needs: The Worcester area Girl Scouts has very few college aged volunteers and is seeking adult volunteers to coordinate troops. Like the Boy Scouts, interest was expressed in activities designed by college students that could earn a merit badge, particularly an engineering demonstration at WPI.

⁶³ Girl Scouts Website - http://www.girlscouts.org/who_we_are/facts/

Additional Details: The Girl Scout Association has a total of twenty employees in three offices within Central Massachusetts. Ninety nine percent of the organization is run by volunteers and the organization is known for their impressive volunteer base. A very small percentage of their volunteers are college students. Volunteers are required to undergo special training, complete a standard application, CORI check and submit three references. The majority of their funding comes from the cookie sale program and membership fees. Other sources of income are grants and private donations.

Conclusions: Like other national organizations, the Girl Scouts were not in major need of volunteers or material goods, but provided opportunities for volunteers looking to design their own programming. The Girls Scout office was very well organized and buzzing with activities. The organization is currently going through mergers and restructuring; the team believes that volunteers would be helpful to aid them with optimizing their operation and strategically planning for their new union.

YWCA of Central Massachusetts

Mission: “The YWCA USA is a women's membership movement nourished by its roots in the Christian faith and sustained by the richness of many beliefs and values. Strengthened by diversity, the YWCA draws together members who strive to create opportunities for women's growth, leadership, and power in order to attain a common vision: peace, justice, freedom, and dignity for all people. The YWCA will thrust its collective power toward the elimination of racism, wherever it exists, and by any means necessary.”⁶⁴

⁶⁴ YWCA Website - <http://www.ywca.org/site/pp.asp?c=djISI6PIKpG&b=281372>

Services Provided: The YWCA provides services in the following categories:

- Housing & Supportive Services - The YWCA of Central Mass. provided 79 women with housing and supportive services and provided 13870 days of shelter in 2007.
- Youth Development - The YWCA offers programs to help young people learn leadership, motivation, and social and mental independence. In 2007, 458 young people participated in youth development programs.
- Health & Wellness - The YWCA promotes physical activity, wellness, and a healthy lifestyle. In 2007 the YWCA of Central Mass served 681 fitness plan members.
- Children's Services - The YWCA provides early childhood education programs for infants, toddlers, and preschoolers.
- Domestic Violence Services- The YWCA provides domestic abuse programs and is sensitive to the needs of those affected by abuse. In 2007, the YWCA of Central Mass provided court advocacy to 4,000 domestic violence victims, provides 4,373 days or emergency shelter, and provided counseling services to 2,500 women and children.
- Career Development Services- In 2007, the YWCA helped 652 individuals with employment services.
- Teen Services - The YWCA provides support to teen parents, and prepares them for independent living.
- Data from YWCA of Central Massachusetts Annual Report - 2007

Needs: Like other organizations of its size, the YWCA did not require many volunteers but did express interest in implementing programs designed by students.

Additional Details: The YWCA has an estimated ninety employees who vary between fulltime administrators and part-time coaches. The organization has volunteers involved in every aspect of their operation, from college students who assist with manual labor to special committees made up completely of volunteers. As such, they do not have a specific count of their volunteers and are fairly flexible with volunteer requirements depending on the area of interest. Volunteers are generally required to complete CORI checks, and only interns are allowed to work with victim patrons. They are mainly funded by the government grants and receive small private donations as well as assistance from United Way. A small amount of income is obtained from their childcare and fitness services.

Conclusions: The YWCA was a large organization with well developed programs and sources of funding. Because of this, they did not have many available volunteer opportunities but did express a need for interns in their offices. The YWCA offers a wide range of services, much of which were unknown to the team prior to the interview. The team believes that it would be beneficial for the YWCA to invest in volunteers who could increase awareness of their services in the community. The building was also one of the more outdated ones seen during the interview process and it is believed that if their building was renovated they would attract more patrons. Volunteers could be useful for sourcing funding from grants to make this a possibility.

6.3 Interview Analysis- Other Organizations

Throughout the course of the project the team had meetings with the WPI Student Activities Office and Colleges of Worcester Consortium Office to gauge the feasibility and sustainability of the project.

WPI Student Activities Office

The team met with Emily Perlow and Jonathan Sparling of the Student Activities Office. The purpose of this meeting was to determine what resources were being used to inform students of community service opportunities and to determine whether or not this database could be incorporated into the WPI Community Service Office. The team was informed that currently there is a paper database that lists the available community service opportunities that is created at the beginning of the school year and updated as needed. Opportunities are also publicized through emails and posters around campus. The SAO website lists a few opportunities, but is highly unused because it does not cater to the categories of interest of students. It is known that students prefer one-time commitments as opposed to weekly service, and so it is a challenge to make students aware of their opportunities when they suddenly present themselves.

The SAO was open to a database that could function as a matching tool for students and organizations, but did express a concern for maintaining a homegrown WPI database. They recommended investing in a website module that could be purchased with a yearly license and maintenance. Suggested recommendations were: www.dosomething.org, www.volunteermatch.org and www.servicelearningpro.com . In the event that the team did opt to use a WPI database, the SAO gave the team the contact information for the appropriate WPI database personnel.

In the second meeting, the SAO critiqued the first draft of the student survey questions and assisted the team with enhancing the survey design. The third meeting was with Jonathan Sparling only, and was for the purpose of requesting time the agenda of the Worcester Colleges Community Service Engagement Committee monthly meeting to present the teams recommendations.

Colleges of Worcester Consortium

The team met with the Chief Executive Officer of the COWC, Mark Billota and his Executive Assistant Cynthia Young of the Colleges of Worcester Consortium on February 25th of 2009. The purpose of this meeting was to inform the College of Worcester Consortium group of the project and determine its feasibility for the Consortium. The attendants found the project very interesting and believed that it would be very useful for the Consortium and easy to integrate into their current database. They recommended assessing their current database technology which was provided by the College Central Network and gave the team the contact information for their liaison. They suggested that the team submit a proposal to the Community Service Engagement Committee of the consortium colleges.

6.4 Survey Activities of WPI Students

Two surveys were sent to the WPI undergraduate student body and one hundred and sixty responses were received. This was less than 10 percent of the WPI population and was not an ideal sample from which to draw firm conclusions but was analyzed for the purpose of the report.

One hundred and twelve of these students were active volunteers and forty eight were either non-active volunteers or individuals who have never volunteered in the past. It would appear that a greater number of WPI students are active volunteers than inactive volunteers, but in actuality the team believes that the survey title, which included the words “Community Service”, was more appealing to students who currently volunteer and as such the majority of our sampled students consisted of current volunteers.

Thirty percent of the students who completed the non-volunteer survey had never volunteered in the past, and sixty percent were volunteers that were currently not active. Figure 6.2 on the next page illustrates a breakdown of the areas of service that inactive volunteers participated in by percentage. Non-volunteers who had no prior experience in community service were not included in the graph.

Mentoring/Tutoring and Disabled/Health categories were the most popular service areas that inactive volunteers assisted with in the past. Those categories require a great deal of interpersonal skills and it is believed that this is why they were more appealing to college students. The second most popular service area for non active volunteers was Hunger and Homelessness. This area of service frequently receives aid from student groups, especially during high school, and as expected many of the students that listed these areas mentioned high school volunteer involvement. Other categories, listed by highest popularity, were: Families and Elders, Arts and Environments, Children Services and Abuse (domestic, children, substance). The team was unable to predict the high level of participation in the areas of Arts and Environment because it appeals to small groups of students with special interests in this area. The Abuse category had the smallest percentage of inactive volunteers and this is due to the training requirement for individuals who work with abuse victims. On the contrary, volunteering with families and children tends to be very flexible and it was surprising to observe that many non active volunteers did not participate in those categories. Service activities that did not fall in the above categories were included in the Others category which was made up of fifteen percent of the inactive volunteer responses. Some of the activities that were listed under this category were “fixing computers for students”, “clean-up service in Africa”, and “library assistant”

Similar results were not obtained for active volunteers with current service commitments. About five students misunderstood the instructions and listed no current involvement in service even though they took the active volunteer survey. This could have been avoided if the survey titles were more distinct specifying ‘Active Volunteer Survey’ and ‘Past and Non-Volunteer Survey’. The responses from these students were not included in the results. The areas that were serviced by active WPI volunteers were included in Figure 6.3 below with percentage involvement.

The most popular service category was Mentoring and Tutoring at local schools and Big Brother Big Sisters club houses. College students are ideal for motivating and inspiring the youth and have the ability to share their knowledge with younger peers in a way that older individuals cannot. It was no surprise that this category was the most popular among students. Almost fifteen percent of the responders mentioned an affiliation with Greek organizations and also involvement in fundraising for large research funds, two of which were Relay for Life and Juvenile Diabetics. Greek organizations are required to adopt a charity and as such the team predicted that many Greek students would be involved in fundraising activities. Fundraising events tend to occur on a sporadic basis, which makes them appealing to student volunteers. Therefore, it ranked second among activities for active volunteers. Children services follows behind these two categories because college students can easily identify with younger peers and more inclined to assist and help to shape youth as opposed to assisting adults.

Arts/Environment, Hunger/Homelessness and Disabled/Health service were ranked similarly with either seven or eight percent of student participation. These service areas were also ranked low and had fifteen and nine percent participation among inactive volunteers. The team believes that it is because that these types of service do require either extensive training or a special interest. The least popular areas of service were Families/Elders, Religious and Abuse. Serving the abused would also require a great deal of training, and religious service would require a personal conviction and so had expectedly lower number of participants. The team was surprised by the low level of participation for assisting families and the elderly because this type of service is fairly flexible, and would be expected to be more appealing to college students.

6.5 Community Service Opportunities and Appeal on WPI campus

Volunteers and Non-volunteers were both asked to communicate the source from which they learnt about community service opportunities. The results for non-volunteers are included in Figure 6.4 and those of volunteers are illustrated in Figure 6.5.

Almost 50 percent of the students who filled out the non-volunteers surveys were unaware of where to find nonprofit organizations in need of volunteers. At first glance it would seem that students do not volunteer because they are uninformed of the service opportunities in the community, however, non-volunteers were also asked if they would be more inclined to participate in community service if it was sponsored by WPI. Only 43 percent of the students said yes, 42 percents of the students were neutral and the other 15 percent said no. It is therefore evident that while some students do not volunteer because of the lack of knowledge of service opportunities, almost the same number of students would not volunteer if opportunities were more effectively publicized on WPI’s campus. The team believes that this is due to the demanding schedule that the average WPI student has. As important as community service is, students find it challenging to participate while balancing their scholastic and non-academic activities.

Nearly 40 percent of active volunteers and 20 percent of non-volunteers learned about service opportunities from their friends; this was the highest and second highest response for volunteers and non-volunteers respectively. Approximately 25 percent of the volunteer respondents and only 6 percent of non-volunteers were made aware of opportunities through the WPI Community Service

Office. Although the Community Service Office was the least prominent choice for non-volunteers it was the second most selected response for active volunteers. Volunteers and non-volunteers were then asked whether they found community service on WPI’s campus to be appealing and the majority of students in both groups were neutral. These results are illustrated in the Figures 6.6 and 6.7.

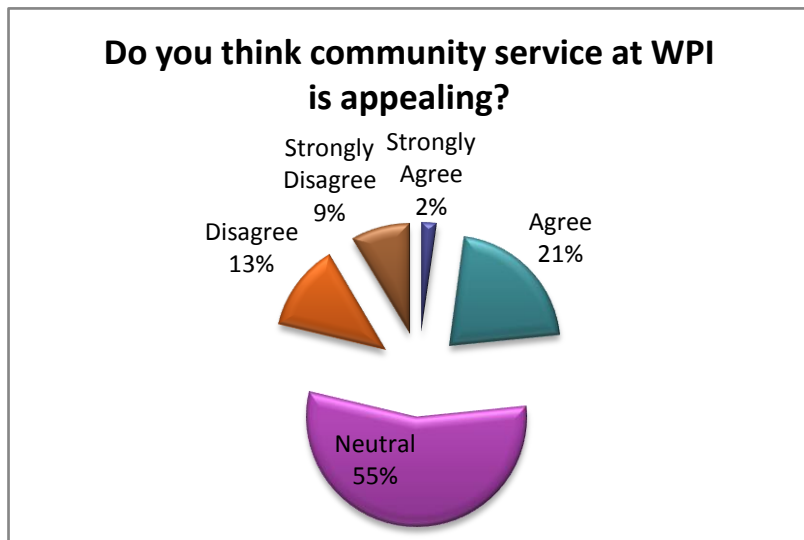

Figure 6.6: Appeal of Community Service on WPI Campus to Non-Volunteers

The second largest response for both groups was in agreement with this statement and this signifies that while the public relations may not be reaching majority of the students, they are still making an impact in an estimated 28 percent of the students surveyed based on the figures from both groups.

When asked what the Community Service Office can do to more effectively inform students of opportunities, the most popular responses were emailing them out to students and posting them on the myWPI website. The Community Service Office does email some opportunities to students but does not do this on a regular basis because it may be appear as spam to those members of the student body that are not interested. Posting service opportunities on myWPI would be a very effective way of communicating to selected interested students especially by using the Groups and Discussion Board features of myWPI. This recommendation will be discussed in further detail in Chapter 8.

6.6 Commitment level of Students to the Community

Non-volunteers were asked whether they would prefer regular or episodic volunteer commitments and were asked to list their ideal time volunteer commitment per month. The results are illustrated in pie charts of Figure 6.8 and 6.9.

Seventy percent of non-volunteers stated that they would prefer to make one time commitments rather than continual obligations. This is to be expected based on the level of involvement on campus and the constantly changing term-based schedules of the average WPI student, it would be difficult to commit to a service activity for extended periods of time. College students also have a great deal of flexibility in their college lives and so do not readily welcome demanding tasks they are compelled to complete.

The distribution of non-volunteer students for preferred time requirements was fairly close. Forty percent of non-volunteers stated that they would prefer to volunteer for five hours per month while 36 percent would prefer less than five hours per month. The other 24 percent would volunteer ten hours per month and no students selected to volunteer for more than ten hours per month. Active volunteer time commitments were somewhat similar in that eighty percent of the students volunteered for less than 5 hours per week (less than 20 hours per month) and no students volunteered for more than 15 hours per week (60 hours per month). This can be seen in Figure 6.10 on the next page.

Figure 6.10: Current Time Commitments of Active Volunteers

These time commitments are extremely small, especially those of non-volunteers, when compared to the needs in the Worcester community. These time commitments, however, were honest answers about how willing students would be to give of themselves to the society while balancing their other activities.

Current volunteers were asked how committed they were to their service and if they were maximizing their volunteer service. The majority of students stated that they were only fairly committed and were not maximizing their volunteer service. These results are included in Figures 6.11 and 6.12 on the next page.

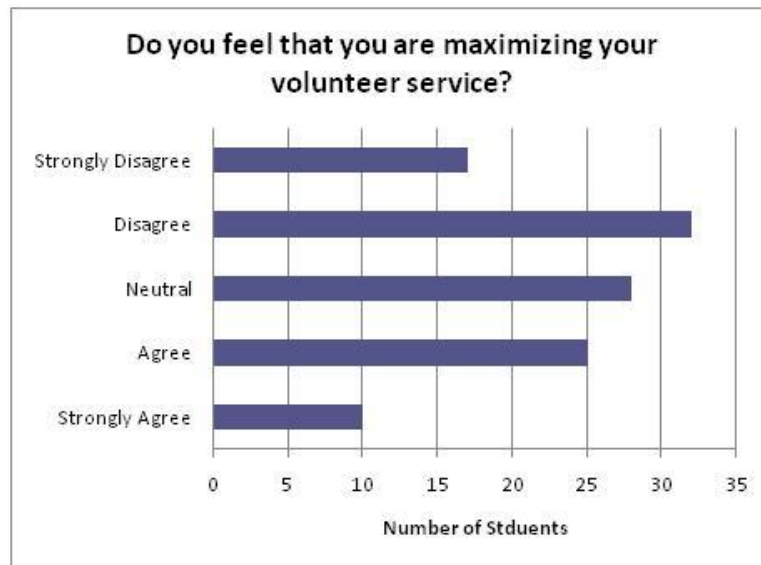

Figure 6.12: Current Volunteer feelings about whether or not they are maximizing their volunteer service

It is evident from these results that that volunteers are not extending themselves to their full potential in their current volunteer service and that non-volunteer do not know the value and level of fulfillment that they can gain from community service. Efforts must be made to stimulate students’ interest and increase participation and knowledge of the benefits of community service. This will be discussed in further detail in Chapter 8 recommendations.

6.7 Skills and Interests of WPI Students

Finally, both sets of students were asked to list the skills that they could offer to community service organizations and what would be their ideal organization based on their interests. These results are included in Figures 6.13 and 6.14.

Unsurprisingly, the most common skill listed by both sets of students were Tutoring followed by Interpersonal. Fundraising and Administrative were the third and fourth most popular response respectively for volunteers and Administrative and Website Development were for non volunteers. Technical Support and Website development were the least common response for Volunteers while Fundraising was the least common response for non-volunteers. Both groups of students had the greatest interests in Mentoring/Tutoring, Children Services and Arts/Environment. This is illustrated in Figures 6.15 and 6.16. The ideal interest categories and current services areas that students volunteered in were similar and from this the team concluded that majority of the students were volunteering in categories that they enjoyed. These results would aid the team in designing the database and determining the organizations to be included in the website based on the skills sets and interests of college students.

The final open-ended question for both surveys asked for the driving force behind the commitments of current volunteers and whether non-volunteers thought community service was important. The responses were generally similar; approximately 80 percent of students expressed a genuine desire to give back to the community and that giving of yourself “gives one a sense of satisfaction”. A few students mentioned that while it is required for their work study they enjoy helping others and even fewer stated that their reason for volunteering was because of their fraternity. Overall, students know that volunteering can be fulfilling and is essential for the community but knowing this and experiencing this are two different things. If more student volunteers experience the true enjoyment and passion for volunteerism they would be more likely to give of themselves in a greater capacity to the community.

6.8 Summary

Valuable information was acquired through the surveys and interviews. Much of which was described in this section, however, it was a great challenge to recollect every minute and detail of interviews. These results will be directly applied to the design of the website by including the needs, popular service categories and common skill requirements based on the responses from the students and organizations.

Chapter 7: Database Implementation

7.1 Introduction

The purpose of this section is to describe the database that was implemented in the final phase of the project. In this section the features, technology and overall interface of the database will be described in detail.

7.2 Database Overview

The purpose of the Community Service Database is to connect the non-profit organizations in the Worcester County with on-campus individuals and organizations. The database will make public the ever-evolving needs of the non-profits, and also will provide a way for community organizations to see the types of assistance the students of the Worcester can supply. The database will be integrated in the Colleges of Worcester Consortium website similarly to their current internship database. The database will be easily updated to list the needs and information of organizations in the Worcester area, as well as the interests and volunteer capabilities of groups and individual on campus that want to help.

Each college will have a student worker whose main task is to contact each participating nonprofit organization. The student worker will work directly via phone or in person with a volunteer coordinator from each organization to update their needs and volunteer availability on a quarterly basis. Students will be able to create and update profiles as individuals or groups and list their talents and contact information for organizations to view and contact them. The purpose of including the skills and interest of students in the database is to provide a matching tool between the Worcester community and the Worcester nonprofit organizations through which groups and individuals can easily determine which organization will best benefit from its service and vice versa. Students and organizations will be able to search for each other based on the information listed in their profile.

7.3 Consortium Student Surveys

In order to better design the database around the needs and interests of consortium students, a short survey similar to the survey distributed to WPI students was sent to a small sampling of COWC students. This survey sample was extremely small because the sole purpose of this three question survey was to obtain data for the demonstration version of the database that would include fifteen organizations and fifteen students. The three questions were identical to questions asked in the WPI-only survey, and were regarding students' areas of interest, the skills they could provide, and the time they were willing to commit to community service. Figure 7.1, below, shows the service categories that the respondents were most interested in.

The results are similar to the results obtained from the WPI survey, with a large amount of interest in the Mentoring/Tutoring category and very little interest in adult education. Figure 7.2 shows the skills that COWC students could provide to non-profit organizations.

Like the results from the WPI survey, there is a large interest in providing Tutoring and Interpersonal skills to organizations, with a greater interest in assisting with fundraising.

7.4 Requirements and Functionality

Using the feedback and results from the COWC Student Survey and nonprofit organization interviews the team developed the database to consist of the following:

1. There will be multiple organizations in the database that will each have a name, category of service and available - if any - transportation for volunteers. A screen shot of the Organization Profile page is included on the next page.

Organization Profile

Creating your Profile

Step 2:

Password:

Name:

Contact:

Category:

Type:

2. There are also volunteer positions that are offered only by organizations. Each volunteer position will be defined by a name, a description, the skills required, and the time requirement.
3. A volunteer will enter a name, their time availability, multiple fields of interest and skills. Volunteers will have to supply contact information in the form of an email address, local address and phone number. A volunteer will also have to agree to have their information shared with nonprofit agencies. Some of these features are shown in Figure 7.5 on the next page.

The screenshot shows a web application window titled "volunteer profile" with the subtitle "Creating your Profile". The current step is "Step 2". The form is organized into two columns of input fields. The left column contains text input boxes for "ID:", "Name:", "Address:", "Phone:", and "Email:", followed by a dropdown menu for "Type:" and another dropdown for "Start Time:". The right column contains dropdown menus for "Skill 1:", "Skill 2:", "Skill 3:", "Interest 1:", "Interest 2:", "Availability:", and "End Time:". At the bottom center of the form are two buttons: "Create Profile" and "Back".

There will be three user groups and their functionality is as follows:

- Administrators will have the ability to view all data that exists in the database as well as add and delete any organization or volunteer.
- Volunteers can upload and edit data into their profiles as well as search organizations based on various criteria.
- Organizations can upload and edit data into their profiles as well as search volunteers based on various criteria.

At login a user will be asked to identify their user type on a screen similar to that in Figure 7.6.

7.5 Database Technology

The team analyzed two database software providers: Service Learning Pro and College Central Network.

Service Learning Pro

Overview: Service Learning Pro is a software solution designed to serve as “a single point of management for connecting client schools with service needs in their communities.” The software allowed different user groups to have different levels of control. This was particularly well suited to the COWC project because the software allowed a group of client schools, called a domain, to share the SLPro Database. Below the domain administrators were site administrators, who controlled the database at one school, and program administrators, who controlled the updating of different volunteers, projects, and organizations. It was this level of control and how well suited SLPro was to community service that made it a strong possibility.

Pros:

- Data sharing among different schools
- Well-structured administration
- Extensive control over volunteers, scheduling, volunteer projects, etc.
- Specifically designed for community service

Cons:

- Initial cost of $6000, yearly fee of $1250
 - However, there was a $2000 dollar discount available until May 2009
- Poor customizability
- Matches are performed by administrators, not students

Conclusions: SLPro matched the database requirements exactly, and had support for multiple colleges built in. SLPro also had an extensive feature set that allowed for elaborate volunteering schedules to be designed, which was something other companies were not willing to provide. SLPro allowed the administrators to control and track every aspect of the database, but because of this the students who would be using the database had limited access. SLPro was an ideal database solution; however the purpose of the database was to allow students and organizations to have some degree of control, which was not a possibility with this software package.

College Central Network

Overview: College Central is a large provider of career services oriented web solutions. The product being evaluated was Career Services Central, which is in use by over 500 college campuses.⁶⁵ Career Services Central is designed to be used by career-services offices at a single university or at a consortium of colleges to allow employers to post job openings and students to find jobs. The software had a volunteering component built in, but it was largely suited to finding employment since that was the original intent of the software. The company also proved to be somewhat difficult to deal with. In addition, the menus were complex and the interface more confusing than other software packages.

⁶⁵ <http://www.careerservicescentral.com/AboutUs.cfm>

Pros:

- Already in use by COWC
- Strong search feature
- User access available to organizations and students

Cons:

- More suited to paid employment than community service
- Somewhat confusing interface
- Poor customer service

Conclusions: Despite the poor customer service and unwillingness to customize the software, CCNET ultimately proved to be the best solution for the COWC. The search feature allowed both students and organization to search based on criteria that would determine a proper match. Another strong factor driving the choice to recommend CCNET was that the COWC was already a large customer of CCNET.

7.6 Database Interface

The preferred graphical user interface will be as follows:

The first screen to be displayed to the user is the homepage screen which will have similar features to Figure 7.7, on the next page.

It will contain a welcoming message in addition to linked buttons titled as follows:

- Sign in tabulation: Opens a window that asks the user to identify by entering his status (volunteer, organization, or admin), username, and password. After identifying the user, a window will appear enabling them to view and update his or her profile or simply view or add and delete organizations and volunteers in case the user is an administrator.
- Create Account tabulation: A window that will allow the user to create a password/volunteer ID, a username/name of volunteer, and classify as a volunteer, an organization, or an administrator. After the new end user's password and username have been accepted and loaded to the database, a screen will appear asking the user to enter the required information in the appropriate text fields in order to complete their profile that will be stored in the database after clicking the submit profile button.
- Search tabulation: A screen that contains sub tabulations (the default sub tabulation will be the Search Volunteer tab). The sub tabs are:

- Search Volunteers tab: allows searching for volunteers using specific criteria.

- Search Organizations tab: allows searching for organizations using specific criteria.

The "Search for Organizations" tab is active. The page contains a text input field labeled "Enter your Organization Search here:". Below this are two "Search by:" labels, each followed by a dropdown menu. The first dropdown is set to "-Category" and the second is set to "-Distance From WPI in Miles". A "Display Search Results" button is positioned below the dropdowns. A large empty rectangular box is located below the button, intended for search results. At the bottom of the page is a "Back to Home page" button.

7.7 Colleges of Worcester Consortium Implementation

The team presented the database proposal to the Colleges of Worcester Consortium Community Engagement Committee on April 27th, 2009. The team intended to discuss the features and functionality listed above and showcase a small demonstration version of the database with the fifteen interviewed organizations and students.

The team contacted the College Central Network liaison for the Worcester Colleges of Consortium in March to obtain a demonstration version of the database software. CCNET seemed very intrigued by the project and suggested that they would provide the team with a demonstration version for their presentation purposes, however, later informed the team that they were not able to customize their current software and only supplied them team with a sample version of their current career database. The team attempted to contact the College Central Network further to add additional fields to tailor the interface more towards volunteering instead of employment such as the service categories for the organizations and skills for the volunteers but was unable to receive any additional feedback.

The team then created a static database interface model that would capture the features and appearance of the proposed database and presented this to the Community Service Engagement Committee on April 27, 2009.

Chapter 8: Recommendations and Conclusions

8.1 Introduction

The Colleges of Worcester Consortium have the potential to stimulate community service awareness with the realization of this database. This database will benefit the COWC by increasing the visibility of student involvement in the community. In addition to this, the joint use of the database by the consortium will encourage cohesive interactions among the colleges. The use of the database will improve the student volunteer experience as it exposes students to areas of community service that they were previously unaware of. Most importantly, nonprofit organizations will gain dedicated volunteers and benefit from the increased awareness of their organization and its cause. A set of recommendations for a successful implementation of the database will now be discussed

8.2 Recommendations

Recommendation 1: Discuss final integration of database with CCNET

As seen in the goals and objectives of Chapter 3, the team intended to have a working version of the database with a small amount of students and organizations that participated in the surveys and interviews. Although the team made steps to implement the database using the CCNET module, they were not successful in the seven weeks allocated for this phase. The foundation, however, has been laid with the College Relations Manager of the CCNET group and the CCNET team is aware of the design and functionality of the database. The next step would be to arrange meetings with the Community Engagement Committee of the COWC and the CCNET team to explore the customization of the CCNET module and determine whether the database should be integrated separately into the COWC website or be an extension of the current internship database.

Recommendation 2: Divide organizations into sectors and assign each sector to a college

Once the database has been fully implemented and tested the COWC Community Service Engagement Committee should separate Worcester County into and allocate each segment to a college. Each college will then hire a student worker who will be responsible for continuously updating the profiles of the community service organizations in their sector. The student should also visit their organizations on a quarterly basis and assess the overall operation as well as the volunteer relationships that currently exist between that organization and students. The team wanted to perform assessments during the interviews but due to the short amount of time allocated for interviews in between classes during the day this was not feasible. A student worker who travels to a variety of nonprofit organizations would be ideal for evaluating an organization's efficiency and can inform their school if they observe critical needs and make useful recommendations to the organization about their operation.

Recommendation 3: Community Service Awareness Campaign on campuses

Finally the true test of the database is whether it is actually utilized by students. To ensure that this occurs, each college has to take instrumental steps to raise awareness of community service and publicize the database on their respective campuses. When students receive notification that they have been granted work-study an informative pamphlet about the database should be included in their package. Work-study coordinators who monitor student's community service should inform students of the database when they inform them of their service requirements. A link to the database should be included on the community service page of each school's website and informative posters and emails should be distributed to the student body on a regular basis.

Recommendation 4: Redefine service categories

The service categories that will be listed in the database must be specific and descriptive. The team condensed many of the categories during the project and during the analysis of the results it was evident that joint categories such as Arts and Environment were more popular than less condensed categories such as Children Services because the joint category referred to a host of areas. For the database Arts and Environment should be further broken down into sub categories such as: Energy, Recycling, Historic Preservations and Artistic Creations to give more distinctive search results.

Recommendation 5: Continued communication between students and service organizations

Due to time constraints the team was only able to interview 15 organizations and 180 students. While the number of organizations was 5 more than we intended the number of student responses was significantly lower than we had anticipated. We believe that the survey title names were not descriptive enough and based on the results some students were confused about which survey to complete despite the instructions. In future the surveys should be titled: Current Volunteer Survey, Past Volunteer Survey and Non-Volunteer Survey. The Consortium should continue to survey and interviews students and nonprofits regarding community service to ensure that needs of both groups are being met and that the database is fulfilling its purpose.

Recommendation 6: Research Service Learning Component

After the proposal meeting with the COWC, many college service representatives were interested in extending the database to include Service Learning opportunities in addition to community service. These two aspects of service are very closely related and although service learning is not very popular in WPI it is in many other consortium colleges. Adding a Service Learning component to the database would be an attractive feature for the colleges. Concerns were raised that it would not be ideal for service learning students to find their own service opportunities because in order to receive credit they need to follow strict regulations. As such additional communication should be made with community service/service learning coordinators at each of the colleges to see the features and requirements for a Service Learning component of the database.

8.3 Conclusion

If the need for increased awareness of community service opportunities in Worcester is not addressed, the talents and skills of the college students will continue to be underutilized. By engaging student's participation in service they will develop a sense of connection to their community and will later feel more inclined to reside and contribute to the Worcester community after they have completed their education. This database is one step in this direction; by investing in improving the connection between students and community service the COWC will be investing in the longevity and sustainability of the Worcester community.

This section contains summaries of each interview, written on the date of the interview.

Why Me

2/5/09

Anne Reardon

Why Me Inc is a non-profit service organization dedicated to “providing love and support for families with childhood cancer”. Why Me is an acronym which stands for Worcester Help for Youth Memories Everlasting. This acronym was created by a young girl name Sherry Shepherd who was the first patient in the University of Massachusetts Oncology Clinic. Sherry wanted to bring cheer to the lives of other patients in the clinic and so with the assistance from her family she brought teddy bears for all the children in the clinic. Sherry and her father later started the Why Me organization whose purpose was to give children with cancer the rare opportunity to feel like children during their tormenting fight. Why Me is an umbrella organization for the Sherry’s House and Activities Center which provides temporary housing for families with children battling cancer. Both organizations work closely with the University of Massachusetts and Boston Children’s Department of Oncology; the volunteers from Why Me regularly volunteer with the patients at these hospitals and inform them about the services of Why Me and Sherry’s House. Although Why Me is affiliated with these hospitals they receive no form of financial assistance from these organizations and are funded solely from the donations and fund raisers put on by the organization and their volunteers. During these difficult economic times Why me and Sherry’s House are in need of financial assistance in any form to aid with the general maintenance and operation of the organization.

Why me Inc has been active members of the Worcester community since the eighties helping approximately 450 families in Central Massachusetts per year. They have been affiliated with WPI in the past and currently attend the yearly Community Service fairs that are held in the fall. Although they receive a fair amount of feedback from WPI students during the fairs their volunteers are still generally retired citizens and high school students. Why Me/Sherry’s House volunteers can assist the organization in a number of areas. The Volunteer Coordinator, Anne Reardon, is open to volunteer activities in various forms. She would like to have students who can come weekly and share with the children as well as a student who can come on a irregular basis to assist with maintaining their computer s and hardware. The most useful assistance would be one-time commitments during fundraising activities; college students would be ideal for set up as well as for assisting with logistics and the general execution of the event. Volunteers have very little requirements: an approved CORI check and a minimum age of fourteen. The Why Me organization has never had to turn any volunteers away and do not have a required time commitment.

Although Why Me is governed by a board of directors and has approximately ten employees it is more than just an organization; it is a service that provides financial and emotional support in addition to cheer to not only the children but the entire family of the cancer patient. Why Me volunteers have brought meals to the homes of families, brought coffee and doughnuts to the Oncology Clinic and provided financial assistance with bills when families have found themselves in binds due to their inability to work as they would have in the past. Why Me also puts on holiday and Halloween parties in which they hand out gifts to all the children as well as annual retreats during which families can enjoy the exciting moments and take a break from the constant routine of the hospital. What makes the Why Me organization so unique is their willingness to go above and beyond what one would expect from a normal organization. Why Me has gifted families with tickets to local concerts and sports games and have even paid for limousine rides to these events to give the families a true sense of luxury and delight that they could have never had.

Sherry's House is a boarding lodge where families can stay completely free of cost during their child's treatment. Sherry's House contains eight bedrooms, a private apartment, a communal kitchen, family and games areas, an art and craft room and a playground. Families can stay for as little as one night if they are in need of one day treatment or up to eight weeks if they have travelled an extensive distance and are being treated regularly. The private apartment is a unique feature that was designed for families who have returned home with their children for final care and functions as a hospice during the final days of the child's life. Families have come from as far as Mid-West and Puerto Rico and as close as Worcester. Families become knowledgeable of Sherry's House by references from the clinic, by word of mouth in the communities or during visits with volunteers at the hospital. To be admitted to the house families are only required filling out a short informational form which gives general information about the family and child with cancer. Sherry's House has never had to turn families away in the past and in addition to providing each family with a room they provide breakfast as well. Sherry's House can use volunteers for daily tasks such as running play groups with the children in the house or aid with general housekeeping which is a rather large task for a house with eight bedrooms and an apartment. The house is always in need of household donations and has a wish list which is regularly updated and posted on their website.

The Why Me/ Sherry's House organization is an influential entity that has been serving the community for over twenty years. It has been successful because of the generous donations of their volunteers and can continue to touch the lives of families with childhood cancer with the assistance of students and faculty of prestigious organizations such as WPI.

Boys and Girls Club

2/9/09

Joseph Hungler

The Boys and Girls Club of Worcester was formed in 1889 after one woman wanted to make a safe place for boys to hang out instead of on the streets. The purpose of the Boys and Girls Club is to help children to develop their full potential while providing them with access to technology, sports, arts, leadership training and education. The Boys and girls club is open to children between the ages of eight and eighteen from all demographic and financial backgrounds. Today however majority of the members of the Boys and Girls Club live below the National Poverty Line. As such many of the members are from impoverished communities with limited resources and the club functions as a place where their voice can be heard and a place where many of the pressures from their communities are alleviated. There are three Boys and Girls Clubhouses in Worcester: Downtown, and . The team had the pleasure of visiting a recently renovated 2 year old clubhouse in Downtown Worcester and with Mr. Joe Hungler the <<title>>. He gave the team details about the administrative aspects of the club as well as informed the team of the variety of services offered by the organization as well as the needs that could be uniquely filled by WPI students.

The purpose of the Boys and Girls Club is "to awaken a sense of possibility in the lives of the youth to become responsible citizens and leaders and positively impact their communities." The slogan which states "a safe place for kids" and this is precisely what it provides. Students congregate here after school in either: the study center, basketball court, swimming pool, digital graphics center, recording studio or lounge/dining area. Children pay an annual fee of twenty five dollars to be able to use the facilities and services and daycare for children under the ages of eight also incurs and monthly fee. This fee in no way covers the costs of running the club house in fact it only accounts for about ten percent of the expenses. As such the center receives additional funding from outside donors such as: local businesses as well as umbrella organizations such as United Way. A fair amount of fundraising is done to supplement club expenses.

The club can use volunteers in every area but mentioned a specific need for one time project volunteers with technical skills. Some of the suggested projects involved: providing monthly computer maintenance on the machines in the club, tutor for digital arts project and creating a Visio set up of the building for events. In addition to this, there is a need for students in math and science to dispel the stereotypes of science students. .

The Club attains volunteers by contacting colleges and attending community service fairs in the consortium. They have worked with few WPI students in the past and would love to build a stronger relationship. The club currently has approximately sixty five paid employees that are both full time and part time; a regular volunteer base of one hundred and fifty a year. They serve approximately three hundred children a day among the three Worcester club houses. There are numerous facilities in the club house but a lack of skills and time to use them to the full potential

2/11/09

Dave McMahon

Dismas House has been a part of the Central Massachusetts community for over twenty years. Dismas House is part of a three stage process to assist ex-prisoners with re-entering the community and introducing the community to the ex-prisoners. The purpose of Dismas House is to reconcile prisoners with society. At Dismas House they provide a range of housing and services to homeless former prisoners and their families. All residents are expected to work during their stay or partake in some form of activity during the day if they are disabled. The three step process involves: Almost Home Programs that provide therapy, legal and re-entry activities to aid to twelve former prisoners with entering the community successfully. The second stage is Dismas House which serves twelve former prisoners focuses on continued recovery, renewal and employment. The final stage is Brooks House which serve about eight ex-prisoners and is an apartment style living arrangement in which former prisoners who are working or looking for job and meeting the requirements can reside.

Dismas House has a total of ten employees that vary as full and part time as well as a therapist, case manager and lawyer. They have a regular volunteer base of about fifty to sixty volunteers who provide assistance in the area of preparing meals, assisting with cleaning and secretarial assistance. Most of the volunteers provide one time commitments but are hoping to have more regular volunteer who can really interact with the former prisoners and provide a sense of belonging to the community. Most of their volunteers are professionals and students and they have no requirements for volunteers. WPI has volunteered with them in the past but they would love to have technical individual around who could evaluate their technology and make their systems more streamline and efficient.

Dismas House is funded mainly by state contracts and grants. They do not charge for the first stage of the program but do charge rent for the second stage to get the residents used to paying rent again and then a flat program fee at the Brooks House. Residents are recommended to the program by the parole board or social workers. Prospective residents interviewed and accessed based on their criminal record for entry into the house. Dismas House has a strict policy of not taking any sex offenders. Although Mr. Dave McMahon did not make any cries for financial assistance he did mention the need for hardware and computer donations for the house.

Compassion Pregnancy

2/11/09

Jan McRae

Compassion Pregnancy Resource Center is a nonprofit organization whose mission is “to provide accurate information, education and service to woman and men facing unplanned pregnancies.” They are not a medical facility and do not facilitate abortions some of the services that they do offer are: confidentiality, free pregnancy tests, options counseling, referrals and resources, abortion recovery support, abstinence education program and material aid for mothers and babies. The organization serves approximately two hundred people a year, mostly females between the ages of twenty to twenty seven.

Due to the sensitive and confidential nature of their services they do not require regular volunteers who are students. Their volunteers are trained peer counselors who are certified to provide support to their clients. They have three paid members of staff who are paid through grants and outside funding when available. In addition to grants their financial assistance comes from donations from individuals, churches and businesses. The type of volunteers they would like is different from most of the other nonprofit organizations; they would be interested in individuals who can write grant proposals as well as newsletters. The greatest need right now is to make students more aware of their services and could use some students who could openly advertise for them.

Hope Lodge

2/13/09

Debra Aharonian

Hope Lodge is a small component of the American Cancer Society that exists to provide temporary housing for adults in active cancer treatment. They are 30 Hope Lodges with the US and Puerto Rico and are funded by the ACS and third party fundraising. Patients are accepted into the service after receiving written consent from a doctor and are referred by social workers or coordinator from hospital. An average stay ranges six to eight weeks but they are some exception where individuals stay for up to six months The Worcester Hope Lodge has nine bedrooms and have never expanded because they are located in a historical building built by a former WPI Graduate. A typical resident is allowed to bring one care giver to reside with them but they generally do not cater to families. They have three full time employees and five part time employees. They have a regular volunteer base of sixty students with tasks that range from drivers to fundraisers. Hope Lodge is also sustained by donations from generous friends in the form of gifts and payment of bills. Their volunteers are of all types: youth groups, high school students, college students and retired individuals. A volunteer is required to complete a background check, and application. They have worked with WPI's Camp Reach and Relay for Life. They would be interested in providing computer training for their residents.

United Way

2/17/09

Kerri Sandberg

The United Way is a large organization with a small purpose of bringing people together to solve the problems in the community. It was started out of a need to provide a portal to get information and connect with Non-Profits. The Volunteer portion of the United Way was started by the Volunteer Center and was adopted by United Way in the 1960s.

Jeremiah's Inn

2/18/09

Walter Spencer

Jeremiah's Inn is a residential program that houses about twenty eight men that was started by the Catholic Church and names after the prophet Jeremiah. It has a threefold mission which is to: aid men with recovery through residential services for men, emergency food program and a education and information component to inform public about the issues of hunger and homelessness. They believe that addiction is a disease and not a moral failing. They are not affiliated with any larger organization such as United Way or a hospital and are funded by the state dept of health/ bureau of substance abuse. They are also funded by grants and private donations from their annual appeal. They have ten employees and about 150 regular volunteers that prepare meals, donate to the food pantry, bake birthday cakes and adopt rooms for renovation.

Their residents have to remain clean and sober, be approved based on their application, have minimal mental health and complete regular drug screenings. The men they cater to are from all cross-sections of life from doctors, teachers and impoverished individuals. The organization serves about four hundred to five hundred families a month in the food pantry and the food is supplied by federal and state agencies as well as the food bank. They do not require many volunteers for manual labor because the men in the house are expected to partake in all activities that take place. They would mostly need food and volunteers who are looking to build community by coming in and working with the residents. About forty percent of their volunteers are college students and the only requirements for volunteers are CORI checks. They do not currently receive any volunteers from WPI but are really looking for long term volunteers because there are few opportunities for one shot programs and their goal is to build a community for their residents. One interesting observation was that their volunteer from lower income tend to give more than volunteers from more stable organizations and they believe that this is due to the fact that individuals who have experienced hunger and more willing to give than those who don't have a good idea.

Ecotarium

Betsy Maloney

The Ecotarium has been around for over two hundred years and has gone through a variety of name changes and exists to make information available for people to find out and learn about arts and the environment. They have about forty staff members and one hundred and thirty regular volunteers. They are funded by grants, endowments and fundraising. They receive about two hundred guests per week and about four hundred during volunteer week. Their volunteer needs range from interns to do background research and individuals to develop day to day activities to complement exhibits. Many of their volunteers are high school students, senior citizens and retired professors/scientists. Volunteers are extensively trained and expected to make a commitment of six months and be a minimum of sixteen years old. Volunteer tasks include: counting coins, grounds maintenance, work with animals, data entry, and preschool program. Currently they have eight students from WPI and believe that WPI students would be particularly fit for their MicroDiner where they do demonstrations of wind energy, and work with microscopes and different functions. They are also open to WPI students bringing demonstrations from classes to put on display. The cost for attending the Ecotarium is $10 for adults and $8 for children and senior citizens.

Abby's House

2/19/09

Edla Ann Bloom

Abby's House was started because of the issue of homelessness that was initially thought of to exist only in men. Three ladies rented a small building and started opening the doors to women in need of a safe place. The purpose of the organization was to provide a safe haven for women in need who have suffered from domestic violence, low income and women with children. They offer emergency housing in the form of single room occupancy as well as long term permanent housing. The residents share a bathroom and kitchen and receive heat, electricity, cable and food for three hundred and forty dollars per month. In reality residents pay about 45% of what it costs to live in the house and Abby's House pays the other 55%.

75% of the women who live in Abby's House are employed and the other 25% are retired or disabled. Twenty percent of the women are enrolled in school and they have had college graduates in the past year. Abby's House has seventeen employees and a regular volunteer base of 200 many of which are college students. Volunteers assist in the thrift store and many of their volunteers assist on the front office with majority of the administrative tasks and as such they are able to keep their costs down. Abby's House does not receive any government funding but does receive grants. Additional income comes from their thrift store and from individual donations. Their decision to deny government funding is because they are a real grass roots organization that likes the freedom to conduct themselves however they see fit without being obliged to government regulations.

Abby's House serves about one hundred women a year and has affected approximately 1100 women in the 33 years of activity. The facility had 7 units of 2 bedroom apartments and 7 units of single residency occupancy. Abby's House is in need of painting and cleaning and would like to raise awareness of the organization. They would like assistance with their fundraising and are currently working on a plan for sustenance during the economic hardships. They could also use assistance with their property management and individuals to work with their residents on computers.

Worcester County Food Bank

2/23/09

Luke Moore

Worcester County Food Bank is one of twenty food banks nation-wide from the National Feeding America Foundations. They engage the community by distributing food to a number of agencies. The Worcester County Food Bank works with 180 non-profit programs, 88 of which are emergency food pantries such as Jeremiah's Inn and 35 of these programs are right within Worcester. They received over five hundred million pounds of food per year and feed approximately eighty two thousand people in Worcester. The food is provided free of cost with the exception of a small maintenance fee charged to the agencies to alleviate the cost of freight shipping. Much of the food is donated from local wholesales and supermarkets and some from household volunteers. Donations from the community are still overwhelming despite the economic hardships that we are currently facing.

Worcester County Food Bank has approximately twenty employees that are both full time and part time. They have about two hundred regular volunteers per year whose main responsibility is to sort the food that they receive. Their volunteers are mostly groups as opposed to individuals and have to submit applications and receive special training. They expressed a lack of younger volunteers with physical strength and stamina that would be very beneficial to the food pantries. Most of the aid they receive is from individual donations, state funding and grants. At this stage their greatest need is food, financial and volunteers. Due to the working day opening hours of 2pm to 4pm many college students cannot volunteer at that time because of classes. Another challenge is the lack of public transportation in there is; students cannot get to the food bank without a personal car. As a result many of their volunteers are retired individuals. WPI fraternities have done food drives in the past for the food bank and they receive numerous donations and volunteers from Worcester State College.

Massachusetts Veterans Inc

Amanda Riik

The Massachusetts Veterans Inc was started in 1992 because of a lack of residential and wellness facilities for veterans. The logo is “they were there when we needed them so we must be there when they need us” and that is just what they do. Their residential program focuses on job development by providing resume critiquing, computer and writing classes. Their wellness program consists of Alcoholics Anonymous meetings, recovery assistance and community building such as basketball teams and other sports teams. The organization has been around for seventeen years and has two locations: in Worcester and Devens, Ma. Mass Veterans are not connected to any other non-profit organizations and is currently working on opening an outreach center with a food bank, classes for the community, housing and daycare. They can house up to seventy nine veterans per year and either six additional emergency or women veterans.

They have forty-one paid employees and about eighty volunteers per years. Volunteers are required to complete applications, interviews and a CORI check. Many of their volunteers are one time committers who return and turn into regular visitors. The most popular volunteer activity is the sponsor a meal program in which volunteer prepares and serves a meal to the residents. Other volunteer activities include Sunday socials, painting rooms and food drives. They currently receive volunteers from the WPI air force program. They are funded by the state and federal funding, private donations and from grants. They do a significant amount of fundraising with yearly events such as golf tournaments and balls.

Boy Scouts2/27/09*Matthew Conlon

The Boy Scouts exist to instill value in scouts that serve to help these young men in making ethical decisions throughout their life by giving them the opportunity to lead at a young age. The organization has seven employees and over two thousand volunteers throughout the country. Many of their volunteers are adult parents whose children are involved in the program. Most of their aid comes from grant funding with a small portion from United Way and the volunteer families involved. The Worcester Boy Scouts serves approximately fifty youth and are in need of after school programs, summer camp leaders and volunteers for day projects. Volunteers are required to have background checks and training in youth protection. Boy Scouts prefers regular volunteers and currently receive volunteers from the APO fraternity of WPI.

Girl Scouts3/17/09*Thais Teixeira Frost

The Girl Scouts exist to build courage, confidence, and character in girls in kindergarten through the twelfth grade. In the Worcester office there are about sixty staff and twenty full time paid employees, but the organization is largely run by volunteers. Their funding comes from grants and private donations, with any income from membership dues is used to fund the organization on a national level. The Girl Scouts in Worcester were looking for adult volunteers to run troops, or for younger volunteers who had previous involvement with the Girl Scouts to take the initiative and design a math & science or engineering program.

Pernet Family Health3/17/09*Stephanie Katz

Pernet Family Health has a wide variety of programs to ensure the health and well being of low income families in Worcester. Some of these programs include young parent support, at home nursing, housekeeping for those in need, an emergency food pantry, and summer jobs for at-risk youth. In addition, Pernet Family Health builds a sense of community by hosting neighborhood cookouts and block parties, holding a holiday program, and other neighborhood events. Pernet has thirty full time and part time employees, and has on average fifty volunteers per month. Pernet prefers regular volunteers, and are looking for a commitment of at least one semester from student volunteers. College students make up about fifty percent of the volunteers at Pernet.

Most funding for Pernet comes from private donors or grants. Most volunteers have an ongoing commitment with Pernet, and serve over 2300 people per year. Pernet has a large amount of college volunteers, but was looking for more, especially volunteers who could serve as unpaid summer interns. College students were needed in particular for the after-school programs at Pernet, where they could serve as role models, assist with homework, and supervise the community computer lab. There were three summer internships available: one providing food pantry assistance, one supervising the computer lab, and one assisting with the Green Island Garden program.

YWCA

3/18/09

Darlene Heywosz

The YWCA exists to empower women and girls and eliminate racism. The YWCA of Central Massachusetts accomplishes this through providing housing and supportive services, youth development services, career placement assistance, and health and wellness services. The exact number of volunteers was unknown, but the YWCA was already working closely with other area colleges, and not many volunteer positions were open.
